ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF BANKS

LEGISLATIVE RECOMMENDATIONS

Stockholders' Liability.

The statute with reference to the liability of stockholders of banks should be amended in such a way that it will conform substantially to the provisions of the National Bank Act, which means that the stockholders would have an additional liability of 100 per cent of the value of the stock owned by them. This can be accomplished if the proposed constitutional amendment with reference to stockholders' liability is adopted. In addition, the law should provide that the superintendent of banks should have the right, in the event that he takes possession of the bank, to collect this liability. Furthermore, there should be a provision of the statute that where there is an impairment of capital of a bank and the bank is still in operation, the superintendent of banks would have the right to order an assessment to repair the impairment.

Disposal of Rental Contracts in Case of Liquidation.

The Bank Act should also be amended to provide that in the event of the liquidation of a bank, all contracts of the bank which are executory in nature, including leases of the banking premises, should be treated as assets of the bank or should be subject to cancellation at the election of the Superintendent of Banks.

Compensation to be Collected from Branch Banks Operating Trust Departments Under National Charter.

The Bank Act at present limits the amount of assessment collected from national banks for supervision of their trust activities to one-hundredth of 1 per cent of the amount deposited with the State Treasurer for the faithful performance of court and private trusts. The maximum necessary deposit is $600,000 and therefore the maximum assessment would ordinarily not exceed $60 per year.

Some of the banks in the national banking system now operating trust departments have considerable number of branches which are expensive to examine. It is not fair to assess the other banks in the state to furnish funds for the examination of these national trust departments. Some plan should be worked out whereby the compensation assessed against these trust companies would be adequate to at least cover the actual cost of examination and leave some margin for correspondence and handling of reports and other overhead office charges. It would seem only fair that these banks should be required to pay $20 a day for each examiner engaged in the examination of the head office or any branch exercising trust functions.

Number of Annual Reports Required by Law.

Section 140 requires the necessary number of copies of the annual report for members of the State Legislature, etc., and one thousand copies besides for the use of the State Banking Department. For some years past we have had a considerable number of copies unused. Last year this amounted to several hundred copies. With the number of banks recently consolidated or otherwise leaving the state system, it is inevitable that the present supply will be even more excessive. We suggest that the law be amended to give the superintendent of banks discretion as to the number of copies which should be printed for the use of the State Banking Department itself.

Investment in Bank Premises.

An amendment limiting the amount which a bank may invest in banking equipment to 50 per cent of its capital, except with the previous written consent of the Superintendent of Banks, would prevent a good many banks from getting into trouble through over-investment of this sort.

Reports of Loans to Advisory Board Members.

Under section 83 of the Bank Act, and also section 65, which is identical as applying to savings banks, loans made to members of advisory boards of branch banks are subject to report to the State Banking Department. Furthermore, loans to corporations in which advisory board members own a controlling interest require the previous consent of the superintendent of banks, just as would be the case with officers or directors.

The section requires that all such loans be ratified by majority vote of the board of directors of the bank itself and that this approval be recorded in the minutes of the bank. This would appear to be sufficient protection against undesirable or excessive advances to advisory board members or their corporations. It is suggested, therefore, that the bank act be amended to eliminate the requirement of the report of such loans or of previous consent on the part of the superintendent of banks in the case of such loans.

Redeposit of Uninvested Trust Funds With Another Department.

Section 111 of the New York Banking Law provides as follows with respect to uninvested trust funds redeposited with another department of the same bank:

"Funds deposited or held in trust awaiting investment by any such bank exercising fiduciary powers shall be carried in a separate account; shall not be used by the bank in the conduct of its business, unless it shall have first set aside in its trust department, stocks or bonds of a kind in which savings banks are required by this chapter to invest their deposits. In the event of the failure of such bank, the owners of the funds held in trust for investment shall have a lien on the bonds or other securities so set aside in addition to their claim against the estate of the bank."

The provision of the National Banking Department is almost exactly the same as this, and was probably copied verbatim from the New York law. National trusts under our supervision and also under the supervision of the national department are now required to follow this provision. I would suggest that it is desirable to amend the California State Bank Act to protect the use of such funds in the same fashion as set forth above.

Investment of Bankers' Acceptances.

It is recommended that amendments be adopted to liberalize the sections which permit the investments of banks in bankers' acceptances.

Section 80 now limits investments in such acceptances to the unsecured loaning limit of the commercial department. This seems unnecessarily restrictive. We suggest that the commercial department be placed under the same limits as savings banks (see section 67).

Reporting Loans to Employees (Commercial).

It seems to me that this section can be modified in so far as it applies to loans to employees. At present, each bank is obliged to have a special resolution of its board of directors approving or ratifying loans to officers, directors, employees, etc., and detailed reports of the making and the payment of its loans must be made to the superintendent of banks. The purpose of the section, of course, is to prevent the dissipation of the bank's funds to officers and directors in charge of them. Presumably, the reason for including the employees was the fact that loans might be made in the names of employees which in reality were for the benefit of officers or directors.

However, the vast majority of loans made to employees are perfectly legitimate and they usually secure them. The big banks have a great number of loans to their employees based upon mortgages covering the homes which these employees are acquiring. Detailed reports of these loans pile up in the banking department and for the most part are of no real value to us and simply entail a great deal of work in keeping records which do not produce enough good to compensate for the work involved. Employees, aside from officers or directors, do not have enough influence to secure loans that need to be particularly watched. We suggest that section 83 be amended so as to eliminate the provision that loans to employees be reported to the superintendent of banks.

Reporting Loans to Employees (Savings).

A recommendation is offered concerning section 65, identical with that offered with reference to section 83.

Posting Names of Directors.

Section 17 of the Bank Act requires that the bank post in a conspicuous place the names of its directors and the par value of the stock which they hold.

We suggest that the section be amended so as to require the posting of the names of the directors without a list of their stock holdings.

Trust Department Examinations.

The language of this section regarding the authority of the superintendent of banks over private trusts should be clarified and the position of the superintendent of banks made definite either one way or the other. The present confusing language makes it difficult to know whether the superintendent has or has not the right to go into private trusts, and if he has, how far his inspection or examination may go. The language of section 101 should be changed to read that:

"The inspection and supervision of the superintendent of banks shall extend to court trusts and private trusts of every kind and character whatsoever without exception," and the paragraph in the section stating that private trusts shall not be subject to inspection or supervision should be repealed.

Reserves on Hand.

Amend section 20 of the bank act by striking out in the paragraph defining reserves on hand, the word "act" and substituting the word "section." The effect would be to limit section 20 to commercial banks, then section 68 permitting a savings bank to maintain $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent reserve in United States bonds would be controlled by section 20 and would then be silent as to where the bonds are held.

Term of Superintendent of Banks.

The Commissioner of Insurance and the Commissioner of Building and Loan Associations have a definite term fixed in the law. The tenure of the Superintendent of Banks is at the discretion of the Governor. In other states the tendency recently has been to give the Superintendent of Banks a definite term. Heretofore, I have hesitated to suggest that the Superintendent of Banks be given a definite term. However, the situation is now such that my recommendation relative to this matter can not be construed as in any way an assertion of personal interest. I therefore suggest and recommend that section 120 of the Bank Act be amended so as to provide that on January 1, 1932, a Superintendent of Banks shall be appointed for a term of four years, and that, thereafter the term be maintained at four years, with interim appointments due to death, resignation or other cause, to be filled for the unexpired term. Until January 1, 1932, the Superintendent of Banks appointed by the incoming Governor would hold at the pleasure of the Governor, as at present. Under such a plan, the Superintendent of Banks would have opportunity, for a period of one year, to work with the incoming Governor, and the Governor would have opportunity to appraise the work of the Superintendent of Banks during that period. This would tend toward greater continuity of service in the case of an efficient Superintendent of Banks and would probably remove the banking superintendency from consideration as a political plum.

RECORD OF THE GROWTH OF THE CALIFORNIA STATE SYSTEM OF BANKS SINCE JUNE 30, 1928

THE GENERAL SITUATION: STATE AND NATIONAL BANK GROWTH FROM 1921 TO 1928

The past decade in California was marked by the most phenomenal expansion and growth in banking business that our state has ever witnessed. After the crisis and depression of 1921, during which many elements of weakness in our financial structure caused by the previous period of inflation were eliminated, a new period of rapid expansion began which was based on sound business growth. In California, as elsewhere, it was initiated by an unprecedented demand for new building and real estate financing. Each succeeding year brought new high levels in the amount of business done by the banks and by 1928 the total banking resources of the state had reached the amazing total of four billion dollars—almost double the amount recorded in 1921. Meantime 393 new banks and branches had become established, bringing the total number of banking establishments in the state up to 1321 on June 30, 1928. From June 30, 1921, to June 30, 1928, total individual deposits in all banks in California increased from $1,780,000,000 to $2,900,000,000, and the volume of loans increased from $1,380,000,000 to $2,324,000,000. It should be remembered also that this tremendous increase in business was accomplished in face of a heavy war time carryover in the form of loans, many of which were rendered valueless due to drastic price reduction on agricultural products.

The past two fiscal years and particularly the one just closed have shown a slackening in the rate of banking growth and if we take a sane view of the situation, we must admit that it was to be expected. Business in the past has been marked by periods of rapid growth which were always followed by periods of stagnation. Banks reflect quite accurately the general changes which take place in business and it is now a well established fact that business on the whole began to slow up early in 1929. The fiscal year ending June 30, 1929, showed that a decline in the deposits of banks had already begun, though in California a substantial increase was recorded. At that time it was attributed to speculative enthusiasm on the part of the general public; but, while that may offer a popular explanation, events have since proved that the real reason was a decline in business, for the collapse of the market did not bring money back into the banks. On June 30, 1930, bank deposits were everywhere lower than on the previous June 30 and in California the total of $2,894,000,000 was considerably less than the all time record of $2,978,000,000 which was established on June 30, 1929, and slightly less than the figure for 1928 shown above.

The volume of loans carried by all banks in California diminished somewhat during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, not, however, due to a lack of ready money in the banks, but due to a general falling off in the demand for legitimate financing both in real estate and in industry. These are both characteristics of a period of industrial depression. The cash resources of the banks and bond holdings have meantime increased by virtue of loan retirements and when the present period of depression has passed, the banks will find themselves in a much better position to aid in the general revival of business than they were in 1921. It can be unequivocally stated that the banks in California have never been in better condition internally than they are at the present time.

PART I

PROGRESS MADE BY STATE BANKS DURING THE FISCAL YEAR ENDING JUNE 29, 1929

A general picture of the progress of banking has been presented in the above. We are now concerned only with those changes which have taken place in the state system of banking which makes up approximately one-half of the total banking enterprise of the state.

Combined Statement of All State Banks and Branches Reporting on June 30, 1928.

The following summary, based on the Called Report of June 30, 1928, reveals that the state system of banks had $1,807,000,000 in Resources at that time, of which $1,195,000,000 was in Savings banks and Savings departments, $597,700,000 was in Commercial banks and the remainder, $14,309,000, was in Trust Companies and Trust departments.

Changes in the Structure of the State Banking System During the Fiscal Year Ending June 29, 1929.

On June 30, 1928, there were 274 banks with 349 branch offices under the supervision of the Superintendent of Banks. Of this number 21 were Commercial banks, 45 were Savings banks, 12 were Trust Companies and 196 were departmental banks. During the year 6 new banks were licensed by the Superintendent of Banks, 4 of which were consolidations of banks already in the state system, making a total of 276. This number was reduced by two conversions to the national system and two purchases of state banks by national banks. In addition to these, 26 formerly independent state banks became branches of state banks by purchase, one bank voluntarily retired and one was closed by the Superintendent of Banks and placed in liquidation. As a result, the number of banks reporting on June 29, 1929, was reduced to 244—thirty less than reported on June 30, 1928.

During this same period 15 "de novo" branches or new branch locations were licensed and established. In addition 69 branches were licensed as the result of the purchase of 16 national banks with 35 branch offices, and the 26 state banks mentioned in the preceding paragraph, which were purchased by other state banks, making a computed total of 433. Of this number, however, 54 were conveyed to the national system through sale or conversion of the parent bank and five branches were voluntarily closed, leaving a total of 374 branch offices in the state system on June 29, 1929—25 more than reported on June 30, 1928.

The Effect of Conversions, Etc., on the State System of Banks During the Fiscal Year Ending June 29, 1929.

As a result of the various changes outlined above, the state system of banks gave over $274,744,000 in Resources to the national system and acquired $181,749,000 during the fiscal year 1929—a net decrease in Resources of $92,995,000. It should be stated that this loss has nothing whatever to do with the actual internal progress of the banks themselves, but does account for practically all of the changes which appear in the combined comparative statements of the state system of banks based on year to year data. A purely structural change, such as is outlined below, should not be confused with the actual growth achieved by the banks which on any given date make up the state system.

In the following tabulation these summaries are brought together, showing the actual progress made during the year 1929 by the banks that comprised the state system on June 29, 1929.

(x) Column No. 2 gives the net result in terms of assets and liabilities of all changes in the identity of banks during the fiscal year ending June 29, 1929. Column No. 3—the difference between columns No. 1 and No. 2—is a reconstruction of the June 30, 1929, statement of the banks reporting on June 29, 1929, thus making possible a year to year comparison in which differences, due to banks coming in or going out of the state system, have been entirely eliminated.

In the above it will be noted that 244 banks reporting in June, 1929, had made an aggregate increase of $33,500,000 in resources, due chiefly to an increase of $38,000,000 in the volume of commercial loans. Holdings of United States Bonds had declined by $5,700,000, but other bond holdings had increased by $3,600,000. Capital account showed an increase due to the new capital structure of consolidated and merged institutions. Individual commercial deposits increased by $2,000,000 and individual savings deposits by $25,700,000. Deposits due to banks declined $10,000,000.

These aggregate increases and decreases in the various items on the statements of the banks were a reflection of the general business conditions as they developed during the year. Real estate activity had been on the decline for a number of years, and this is shown by the reduction in the volume of real estate loans. The increase in commercial loans undoubtedly contained a large element of security loans; however, bank borrowings, a usual concomitant of security market financing, showed a decline over their previous June level. In all the year was a successful one for the state banks and substantial increases were made in the deposit lines of the banks. While the record of growth of the immediately preceding years was not maintained, the state system received its share of the available banking business. Now that we have come to realize that the period of depression actually began early in 1929, the progress of the state banks meantime becomes noteworthy.

PART II

PROGRESS MADE BY STATE BANKS DURING THE FISCAL YEAR ENDING JUNE 30, 1930

The combined statement of the resources and liabilities of the 244 state banks with 374 branch offices, as reported on June 29, 1929, has already been given in Table III above. Before setting forth the June 30, 1930 statement, account must be taken of the structural changes that took place in the state system during the fiscal year just closed.

Changes in the Structure of the State Banking System During the Fiscal Year Ending June 30, 1930.

During the fiscal year 1930 three new banks were licensed, making a computed total of 247 for the year. This number was reduced during the year by one conversion to the national system and two state banks that were sold to a national bank. In addition to these, ten state banks were sold to a state bank, subsequently becoming branches, and two banks were closed and placed in liquidation by the Superintendent of Banks. As a result of these various transactions, the number of head offices and unit banks was reduced to 232, the number reporting on June 30, 1930, being twelve less than the number reporting at the beginning of the year.

We began the year with 374 branch locations and subsequently issued 31 licenses, of which ten were "de novo" or new locations. Of the remaining 21, 15 were formerly head offices of state and national banks purchased by state banks, and six had been branches of a national bank, making a computed total of 405 branch offices. However, during the year 11 state branch offices were sold to a national bank and 8 were voluntarily closed, leaving a total of 386 branch offices on June 30, 1930—twelve more than reported on June 29, 1929.

From a numerical standpoint the state system stood exactly the same on June 30, 1930, as it did on June 29, 1929—the decrease of 12 in the number of banks and head offices was offset by an increase of 12 in the number of branch offices.

Net Gain or Loss in Business to the State System of Banks as a Result of Changes in the State Banking Structure During the Fiscal Year Ending June 30, 1930.

As a result of the various transactions involving the conveyance of state banks to the national system during the past fiscal year, the state system lost $76,836,000 in total resources. On the other hand, the state system acquired $12,241,000 from the national system, making a net loss of $64,959,000. This transfer to or from the national system is a purely structural change that does not affect the actual amount of business carried on by the banks comprising either system at any one time, but unless accounted for in a comparison based on annual data gives a false impression of the actual progress made by either system meantime.

The detailed statement from a balance sheet standpoint of the net effect of the transfer on the business done by the state system of banks appears below.

Combined Statement of All State Banks and Branches Reporting on June 30, 1930.

The 232 state banks with 386 branch offices reported aggregate resources of $1,708,400,000 on June 30, 1930, of which $1,062,000,000 represented the reports of savings banks and departments, $631,593,000 the reports of commercial banks and departments, and $15,146,000 the reports of trust companies and trust departments. Total individual savings deposits stood at $910,000,000 and total individual commercial deposits stood at $370,000,000. Real estate loans aggregated $536,000,000 and commercial loans $470,000,000. The statement shows the banks to be in a highly liquid condition with more than ample funds to meet any contingency. More than $230,000,000 of their resources are in cash and cash items and $385,000,000 are in readily marketable bonds.

The summary statement appears below.

Comparative Combined Statement of the Growth of the Volume of Business Transacted by the California State System of Banks During the Fiscal Year Ending June 30, 1930.

The summary appearing below (Table VII) sets forth the combined statement of the business of the state banks as it was reported on June 29, 1929, the subsequent reductions due to the transfer of business to the national system, and the combined statement of the business of the state banks on June 30, 1930. After eliminating the net effect of all structural changes as shown in the above paragraph, we find that the state system of banks as constituted on June 30, 1930, had $25,000,000 more in resources than the same group of banks reported on June 29, 1929. This increase in resources is due entirely to very substantial increase of $15,000,000 in bonds and $36,000,000 in cash resources. The volume of commercial and real estate loans showed reductions aggregating $45,000,000 for the year. Deposits due to banks increased by $29,000,000 during the year, demand deposits decreased by $8,600,000 and savings deposits showed a gain of less than $1,000,000 for the year. Bank borrowings on June 30, 1930, were at the lowest figures recorded since 1921, aggregating only $650,000, in contrast to $13,000,000 reported on June 29, 1929.

In view of the general business conditions prevailing during the past year, the June 30, 1930, statements of the state banks are gratifying. The state system of banks lost only $9,300,000 in deposits while the comparative statement of all banks, state and national, operating in California reveals a decline of $84,000,000 during the last year. From this we conclude that the banks in the state system are more than holding their own and have not been as greatly affected by the current depression as might have been presumed.

We confidently expect to see in the near future the beginning of another period of rapid banking growth in California that will be just as phenomenal as the past period has been. After the current depression has run its course business will again assume a normal tone. Meantime our banks have a clean slate. There has been no carryover from the "boom" period. They have ample funds to meet every legitimate credit demand.

The comparative combined summary for the fiscal year 1930 follows:

(x) Column No. 2 gives the net result in terms of assets and liabilities of all changes in the identity of banks during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930. Column No. 3—the difference between Columns No. 1 and No. 2—is a reconstruction of the June 29, 1929, statement of the banks reporting on June 30, 1930, thus making possible a year to year comparison in which differences, due to banks coming in or going out of the state system, have been entirely eliminated.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

His Excellency, C. C. YOUNG, Governor,
State of California,
Sacramento, California.

SIR:

We have the honor of handing you herewith the report of your Mexican Fact-Finding Committee.

Respectfully,

WILL J. FRENCH, Chairman,
ANNA L. SAYLOR,
GEORGE H. HECKE.

September, 1930.

A WORD OF PREFACE

The following report will unquestionably rank as one of the most exhaustive and most valuable ever issued by any of the Departments of the California state government. It is the outgrowth of discussions respecting Mexican problems, which took place at meetings of the Governor's Council during the early part of 1928.

As a result of these discussions, the Directors of the Department of Industrial Relations, Agriculture, and Social Welfare were, at the Council meeting of March 28, 1928, directed to prepare a report of a fact-finding nature and noncontroversial in character, a report designed to show the actual existing conditions as to the Mexican population in California. Mr. Will J. French, Director of the Department of Industrial Relations, was made the chairman of the committee of three department directors to whom this work was entrusted.

As will be noted from a reading of the report, its preparation has involved the gathering of a vast quantity of statistical information; and this, together with the fact that it could be prepared only as opportunity offered in conjunction with the regular work of the various departments, has delayed its publication until now.

I have just finished reading the proof of the report, and wish to congratulate Mr. French, Mr. Hecke, and Mrs. Saylor upon the care and thoroughness used in its preparation, and the fair-minded and impartial attitude with which this admittedly controversial subject has been treated. Like other immigration problems which have preceded it, the Mexican problem is of such importance as to justify the utmost of thoughtful care in its solution; but it can be properly solved only with a full knowledge of all the facts, and to help supply these facts is the object of this report.

Although the people of California are primarily interested in this problem from the standpoint of the best interests of our own state, nevertheless from its very nature it can be settled only by national legislation. I therefore commend this report, not only to the people of our own state, but to all others who may have a part in determining the necessity and scope of such future legislation.

C. C. YOUNG,
Governor State of California.

August 17, 1930.

THE MEXICAN FACT-FINDING COMMITTEE,

INTRODUCTION

The Mexican Fact-Finding Committee was appointed by Governor C. C. Young on March 28, 1928. The Governor named on this committee the following three members of his Council: Will J. French, Director of the Department of Industrial Relations, chairman; Anna L. Saylor, Director of the Department of Social Welfare, and George H. Hecke, Director of the Department of Agriculture.

It was the expressed wish of the Governor that the committee confine itself to the preparation and presentation of a report which would contain only facts relating to the industrial, social and agricultural aspects of the problem of Mexican immigration into California. The gathering of biased and partisan views was declared to be outside of the scope of the committee's work.

Mindful of the Governor's wishes in the matter, and being fully in accord with them, the committee instructed its investigators carefully to discriminate between opinions and conclusions based upon divergent social and economic interests and views and dispassionate factual evidence, stripped of all partisanship.

At its organization meeting, which took place soon after its appointment, the committee decided that each of the three state departments represented should make independent studies of the problems with which they were most familiar and which they were therefore best equipped and qualified to investigate and study.

Since there was no special legislative appropriation for the investigations of the Mexican Fact-Finding Committee, it devolved upon the Departments of Industrial Relations, Agriculture, and Social Welfare to draw upon their regular resources of time and money to undertake and complete this work, a fact which is largely responsible for the time taken in the preparation of this report. The Department of Agriculture had secured the cooperation of the College of Agriculture of the University of California in the preparation of its contribution to this report.

In submitting this joint report, the Mexican Fact-Finding Committee feels that the data presented were prepared by its investigators with utmost care and without reference to the possible use to which these data may be put, either by the protagonists or antagonists of Mexican immigration. It is hoped that interested citizens and students of the Mexican immigration problems will find in this volume information which will aid them in their studies of the intricate industrial, agricultural, and social questions which are associated with the problem of Mexican immigration into California.

WILL J. FRENCH, Chairman,
Mexican Fact-Finding Committee.

CHAPTER I

MEXICAN IMMIGRATION BEFORE AND SINCE THE QUOTA RESTRICTION LAWS¹

In this chapter are presented the results of a study of available statistics of Mexican immigration as published by the Commissioner General of Immigration and of related United States census data. These statistics have been analyzed with a view to crystalizing the changes which have taken place in the volume and character of immigration into the United States and into California since the enactments of the 1921 and 1924 per centum limitation laws, known as the quota laws.

THE THREE AND TWO PER CENTUM LAWS

The first per centum limitation law went into effect on June 3, 1921. This law restricted the admission of aliens in any year to three per cent of the number of foreign-born persons of each nationality residing in the United States in 1910, as determined by the federal census of that year. The new immigration law, which went into effect on May 26, 1924, reduced the quota of admissible aliens from three per cent to two per cent. Section 11 (a) of the immigration act of 1924 provides that the annual quota of any nationality shall be two per centum of the number of foreign-born individuals of such nationality resident in continental United States as shown by the federal census of 1890, but that the minimum quota for any nationality shall be 100 per year. This change in the basis for computing the quotas was especially significant because it was aimed at reducing the number of admissible immigrants from countries of southern and eastern Europe in preference to immigrants from countries of northern and western Europe.

Under the 1924 immigration law, the total immigration of aliens from quota countries was restricted to 164,667 annually. Of this total, the annual quota for northwestern Europe was 140,909, or 85.6 per cent; for southern and eastern Europe and Asia, 21,847, or 13.3 per cent; for Africa, Australia, New Zealand, and other Pacific islands, 1821, or 1.1 per cent of the total.

But while the 1924 immigration act effectively restricts the number of admissible aliens from European countries, this act exempts from its quota provision immigrants born in the Dominion of Canada, New Foundland, the Republic of Mexico, the Republic of Cuba, the Republic of Haiti, the Dominican Republic, the Canal Zone, or an alien of an independent country of Central or South America. Aliens from these countries are defined by the law as "non-quota" immigrants.

¹ Most of the data contained in this chapter were published in the March, 1929, issue of the Journal of the American Statistical Association, pp. 50-60, in an article on "Facts About Mexican Immigration Before and Since the Quota Restriction Laws," by Louis Bloch, Statistician of the Department of Industrial Relations and an investigator for Governor Young's Mexican Fact-Finding Committee.

ACTUAL AND REPORTED MEXICAN IMMIGRATION

In considering statistics of Mexican immigration, it is especially important to recognize the distinction between actual and reported immigration. The data published in the reports of the Commissioner General of Immigration show the legally admitted aliens. But in the case of the Mexicans the number of illegal entrants is in all probabilities very considerable. The actual immigration would include the legal and illegal entrants.

The following quotation regarding the unlawful entry of Mexicans into the United States is from a letter written by Hon. James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, on April 15, 1924, to Hon. Cyrenus Cole, House of Representatives, United States Congress:

"On May 22, 1917, the United States Secretary of Labor issued an order instructing immigration officials on the Mexican border to disregard the literacy test, the contract-labor section, and the head-tax provision of the immigration law with reference to the coming of Mexican people who were to engage as workmen in agricultural pursuits. This order remained in force until March 2, 1921, or until within two days of the passing out of the Wilson administration. I have never been able to find out how many people came in under that provision. * * * During the fiscal year 1919, there were imported under this rule a total of 9998. * * * None of those coming under this arrangement were counted as immigrants, because they were admitted on the theory of coming temporarily. * * * Most of them violated the condition of their admission. * * *

"Under date of March 19, 1920, Assistant Chief of Staff for Military Intelligence made a report to the Director of Military Intelligence on this subject. He reports, among other things, that since the suspension of the provisions of the immigration law relating to Mexican laborers it was estimated from facts furnished by Mexican and American border officers that in excess of 100,000 Mexicans entered the United States between February 1, 1920, and the date of his report * * * and but a small part of this number had passed through the immigration stations. * * *

"* * * I believe that at least as many more entered from Mexico during the past fiscal year [1922-1923] through irregular channels as were recorded by the officers of the government at our immigration station. * * * Assistant Secretary Henning reports that it is generally estimated that there are not less than twice as many surreptitious entries as legal ones and that our inspector in charge at Laredo places the number at five times the legal admissions."²

Further testimony regarding the extent of illegal entries of Mexicans into the United States is revealed by a comparison of the United States census data on the number of Mexicans in this country at decennial census periods with available data on total and net Mexican immigration. Thus, in 1900 the census reported the total number of Mexicans residing in the United States as 103,393. The total number of alien Mexican immigrants who came into this country legally between 1901-1910 was 41,490. The highest possible number of Mexicans in the United States at the 1910 census should not have been in excess of 103,393 plus 41,490, or 144,883.³ But instead, the 1910 census enumerated 221,915 Mexicans in the United States. This number is 77,032 more than the most that could be expected in view of the legal number of Mexican entrants into this country between 1901-1910. Assuming that the enumeration in the census years considered was equally accurate, and allowing for mortality and emigration, it may be roughly estimated that approximately 100,000 Mexicans entered this country illegally between 1901-1910.

Likewise, in 1910 the census counted 221,915 Mexicans in the United States. The net increase in the foreign-born Mexican population through excess of immigration over emigration between 1911-1920, was 152,541. The maximum number of Mexicans that could be expected, even were there no deaths, at the 1920 census should be 374,456. But instead the 1920 census reported 486,418 Mexicans in the United States, or at least 111,962 more than could be expected if only the legal entrants were considered. On the basis of these figures, it appears fair and conservative to estimate that during the twenty years 1901-1920, about 200,000 Mexicans entered this country illegally.

The difficulties of enforcing the federal immigration laws along the Mexican border are recurrently described in the annual reports of the Commissioner General of Immigration.

In the absence of reliable information as to the volume of smuggling of Mexican immigrants before and since the per centum limitation laws of 1921 and 1924, only the reported legal entries of Mexicans are analyzed in this chapter.

MEXICAN IMMIGRATION BEFORE THE 1921 QUOTA LAW

Since the three per cent quota law did not go into effect until June 3, 1921, and the two per cent quota law did not go into effect until May 26, 1924, the effect of these laws upon immigration from Mexico may be measured by a comparison of statistics of Mexican immigration before July 1, 1921, from July 1, 1921, to July 1, 1924, and since July 1, 1924. In the following table are presented data showing the number and proportion the Mexican immigrants were of the total immigration prior to July 1, 1921.

*Report of Commissioner General of Immigration, 1927, pp. 190-191.

Eleven years.

(A) Less than one tenth of one per cent.

The foregoing table shows that the immigration from Mexico prior to 1911 was relatively unimportant. During the ten years 1901-1910, only six-tenths of one per cent of the total immigration into the United States was from Mexico. But during the eleven fiscal years 1911-1921, the number of Mexican immigrants was 249,762, or 3.8 per cent of the total number of 6,541,039 immigrants admitted into the United States.

The rush of immigrants from Mexico began during the World War, and was undoubtedly caused by the then prevailing shortage of labor.

MEXICAN IMMIGRATION FROM JULY 1, 1921, TO JULY 1, 1924

Although, as has been pointed out in the preceding section, the Mexican immigration began during the World War period, the great influx of immigration from Mexico was caused by the passage of the quota laws. In the following table are presented the figures of immigration during the three fiscal years 1921-1922, 1922-1923, and 1923-1924, that is, for the period during which the three per cent quota law was in operation.

TABLE 2. NUMBER AND PER CENT MEXICAN ALIEN IMMIGRATION INTO THE UNITED STATES WAS OF THE TOTAL ALIEN IMMIGRATION INTO THE UNITED STATES DURING THE THREE FISCAL YEARS, 1921-22, 1922-23 AND 1923-24

1924.....	706,896	87,648	12.4
Total.....	1,539,371	168,603	10.9

Thus, while during the eleven years preceding the enactment of the three per cent quota law, the number of Mexican immigrants admitted was only 3.8 per cent of the total immigration, this percentage increased, under the new law, to 10.9 during the three fiscal years ended June 30, 1924. The shutting off of immigration from European countries has given an added impetus to immigration from Mexico.

MEXICAN IMMIGRATION FROM JULY 1, 1924, TO JULY 1, 1928 *

In the next table are presented data showing the increase in Mexican immigration in relation to total immigration into the United States for four fiscal years since the two per centum quota restriction law took effect.

* Since the writing of this chapter, there has been a substantial decrease in Mexican immigration into the United States. The reports of the Commissioner General of Immigration show that during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1929, 38,980 immigrant alien Mexicans were admitted into the United States, and that during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1930, the number of such aliens admitted was only 11,915. This decrease in Mexican immigration is attributed to the stricter visa regulations imposed by the State Department in an attempt to restrict Mexican immigration without including Mexico within the quota restriction laws.

An examination of Table 3 shows that the proportion of Mexican immigration in the total immigration increased from 11.0 per cent in 1925 to 18.8 per cent in 1928. During the four fiscal years ended July 1, 1928, the Mexican immigration was 16.1 per cent of the total immigration.

Table 4 shows the annual numerical and percentage increases or decreases in Mexican immigration from the fiscal year 1921-22 to the fiscal year 1927-28, inclusive. This table shows both the effect of the quota limitations on Europeans, which did not apply to Mexicans, and that of the provision for visa and fee included in the two per cent law which did. The greatest increase in the number of Mexicans admitted under the three per cent quota law was in 1924. During this year the increase over the preceding year was 39.8 per cent. During the next year, which was the first year of the operation of the two per cent law, the number of Mexicans legally admitted dropped 55,270, or 63.1 per cent compared with the preceding year.[†] This sudden decrease is undoubtedly due to the fact that 1925 was the first year following the adoption of the visa requirements and the visa fee of $10. Since 1925 the number of alien Mexicans admitted into the United States increased again in 1926 and in 1927. In the latter year the number admitted was 66,766, or 56.6 per cent greater than in the preceding year.

During the latest fiscal year ended June 30, 1928, the total number of alien immigrant Mexicans admitted was 57,765, which was 9001, or 13.5 per cent less than during the preceding year. Alien immigration into the United States, other than Mexican, declined from 268,409 in 1927 to 249,460 in 1928, a decrease of 18,949, or 7.1 per cent.

SUBSTITUTION OF MEXICANS

That the quota restriction laws have resulted in the substitution of the Mexican immigrant for the immigrant from southern and eastern Europe is shown in Table 5, next presented.

During the ten years 1911-1920, the Mexican immigrants were only 3.6 per cent of the total number of aliens admitted. The southern [†] But see earlier discussion of probable illegal entries.

Italians, Hebrews, Polish, English, Germans, Scandinavians, Irish, and Greeks in the order named, were the races which contributed the largest numbers of immigrants, in excess of the number contributed by Mexico. During the seven years 1921-1927, the Republic of Mexico contributed 10.4 per cent of our total immigration. The number of immigrants from this country were exceeded only by immigrants from Germany, England, and southern Italy, in order named. Again during the three years 1925-1927, during which the two per cent quota law has been in operation, Mexican immigrants were 15.2 per cent of the total of immigrants admitted. This proportion was exceeded only by the German immigrants, who were 18.1 per cent of the total alien immigrants admitted during these three years.

While during 1925-1927 Mexicans contributed 15.2 per cent of the total immigration and the southern Italians contributed 3.1 per cent, the situation was practically the reverse in 1911-1920 before the enactment of the quota laws. During this ten-year period the Mexicans contributed 3.6 per cent of the total immigration while the southern Italians contributed 17.2 per cent of the total immigration.

*It should not be inferred from the data in this table that we were getting during the three years, 1925-1927, less Mexican immigrants than we were getting, say, South Italians during the ten years 1911-1920. The average annual number of all immigrant aliens admitted into the United States during the ten years, 1911-1920, was 573,581, but the average annual number of all immigrant aliens admitted into the United States during the three years, 1925-1927, was 311,326. The average annual number of South Italians admitted during the ten years, 1911-1920, was 176,194; during the three years, 1925-1927, it was 9,764. But the average annual number of Mexicans admitted into the United States during the ten years, 1911-1920, was 20,694; during the three years, 1925-1927, it was 47,261.

MEXICAN AND OTHER IMMIGRANTS IN CALIFORNIA

Table 6 and Chart 2 show that the quota restriction laws have changed the racial composition of the immigrants who come into California. Thus, during the three fiscal years 1919, 1920, and 1921, 92,319 of the total alien immigrants who were admitted into the United States designated California as their state of "intended future permanent residence." Of this total, 15,602, or 16.9 per cent, were English; 11,224, or 12.2 per cent, were Japanese; and northern and southern Italians were 15.1 per cent of the total. During these three years the Mexicans were 13,670, or 14.8 per cent, of the total 92,319 alien immigrants admitted into the United States who were bound for California.

It will be observed that the ratios which the Mexicans were of the total immigrants bound for California rose from 14.8 in 1919-1921 to 20.7 in 1922-1924 and to 41.3 in 1925-1928. During the same period the ratios which all Italians were of the total immigrants coming into California dropped from 15.1 in 1919-1921 to 7.0 in 1922-1924 and to 2.7 in 1925-1928.

As a result of the two per cent quota restriction law which went into effect on May 26, 1924, California is now receiving the following principal immigrant races:

PERCENTAGE DISTRIBUTION OF ALIEN IMMIGRANTS COMING INTO THE UNITED STATES DURING THE FOUR FISCAL YEARS 1925-1928 WHOSE "STATE OF INTENDED FUTURE PERMANENT RESIDENCE" WAS CALIFORNIA.

EMIGRATION OF MEXICANS

Whether the immigrant from Mexico returns to his native land after a sojourn in the United States or whether he becomes a permanent resident of this country, is a question of concern to those who depend upon Mexican labor and to others interested in the Mexican immigration problem. But there are no accurate statistics available on the subject of Mexican emigration. The data published by the Commissioner General of Immigration and included in Table 7, following, are considered incomplete, because these figures only record those Mexicans who report to the United States immigration authorities that they are returning to Mexico.

There is no doubt that numbers of Mexicans who go out as "alien emigrants" are not so reported by the official figures of emigration. Just what is the discrepancy between the reported Mexican emigration, as shown in Table 7, and the actual Mexican emigration is not known and can not be definitely established because of the recognized difficulties in securing accurate records of aliens leaving the United States over the land borders.⁴

It was already pointed out in a preceding section of this chapter that the figures of alien Mexican immigration as reported by the Commissioner General of Immigration show only the legally admitted aliens and that these figures do not show the numbers of Mexicans who actually entered into the United States. That the figures of Mexican immigration into, and emigration from the United States are understatements of fact, should be borne in mind when examining the statistics presented in Table 7.

It will be noticed that the number and percentages of Mexican emigrant aliens varies considerably from year to year. Between 1922 and 1927 the ratios of emigration to immigration varied from 2.1 to 31.6. In 1918 emigration exceeded immigration by 42.5 per cent, and in 1919 emigration of Mexicans was 61.6 per cent of the immigration that year. The large emigration of Mexicans during 1818 and 1919 may be accounted for by the general exodus of aliens after the World War. The total number of immigrant aliens admitted into the United States during 1918 and 1919 was 251,750, while the total number of emigrant aliens departed during these two years was 218,107, or 86.6 per cent.

In Table 7 the number and percentages of emigrants are also shown by six-year periods. It will be observed that from 1910-1915 the emigration of Mexicans was 4.2 per cent of the total immigration of Mexicans. During the next six-year period, which included the years of our participation in the World War and the postwar period, the emigration was 34.9 per cent of the immigration. From 1922 to 1927, during which period the quota restriction laws have been in operation the total number of Mexican immigrant aliens admitted was 310,-

⁴ Hon. Frank B. Kellogg, Secretary of State, testified before the Senate Committee on Immigration that it was "obviously difficult" to secure a record of aliens departing over the land borders. See Hearings Before the Committee on Immigration, United States Senate, 70th Congress, 1st Session on S. 1236, S. 1437, and S. 3019, held February 1, 27, 28, 29; March 1 and 5, 1928, pp. 159-160.

For a study of the inadequacy and incompleteness of the statistics of immigration and emigration of Mexicans, as published by the Commissioner General of Immigration, see "Mexican Labor in the United States, Migration Statistics," by Paul S. Taylor, University of California Publications in Economics, 1929, Volume 6, No. 3, pp. 237-255.

385; while the number of Mexican emigrant aliens departed was 18,934, or 6.1 per cent of admitted.

The statement frequently made that the Mexican immigrant returns to his native land after working a while in this country is not supported by these figures of immigration and emigration. Even allowing for a considerable degree of inaccuracy in the emigration figures, the data presented in Table 7 nevertheless point to the conclusion that relatively few Mexican immigrants emigrate back to Mexico. This conclusion is also corroborated by the data presented in Table 8, which show large increases in the Mexican population in the United States since 1870.

NUMBER OF MEXICANS IN THE UNITED STATES

The effect of the quota restriction laws upon Mexican immigration into the United States was shown in the foregoing sections of this chapter. The number and distribution of the Mexicans in the United States will be discussed in the following sections.

The number of persons born in Mexico and residing in the United States at each census year from 1870 to 1920, and the number and per cent of increase from decade to decade are shown in Table 8 and Chart 3. It will be seen that in 1870 the number of persons born in Mexico enumerated by the United States census of that year was 42,435. This number increased each decade until in 1920 it was 486,418. The total increase in the number of Mexicans in the United States between 1900 and 1910 was greater than the total number of Mexicans who resided in this country in 1900. Likewise, the total increase in the number of Mexicans in the United States between 1910 and 1920 was greater than the total number of Mexicans who resided in this country in 1910.

* Department of Commerce: Statistical Abstract of the U. S., 1926, p. 32.

From July 1, 1920, to June 30, 1927, seven fiscal years, the total number of immigrant alien Mexicans legally admitted into the United States was 339,988. The number of reported emigrants during the same seven years was 24,453; so that the net increase in the number of legally admitted immigrant aliens was 315,535. This number added to 486,418, the number reported by the census in 1920, gives a total of 801,953 Mexican residents in the United States in 1927. But since the total of 801,953 does not take into account the illegal entrants, or the nonimmigrants^{4a} who decided not to return to their native land and remained in the United States, the actual number of Mexicans now in the United States is undoubtedly in excess of one million. In his 1926 annual report, the Commissioner General of Immigration said: "In view of the very considerable number of Mexican aliens presumed to be illegally in this country, it is safe to say that over a million Mexicans are in the United States at the present time, and under the present laws this number may be added to practically without limit."⁵

INCREASE OF MEXICANS IN CALIFORNIA

Table 9 shows the distribution of Mexicans in the United States at the census years of 1900, 1910 and 1920.⁶

It will be observed that the preponderant majority of Mexicans were in the states of Texas, California, and Arizona in each census year. In 1900, 93,320, or 90.3 per cent of the total number of Mexicans in the United States were living in these three states. In 1910, this proportion decreased to 85.0, and in 1920 to 82.7. But, while the percentage of the total Mexicans residing in these three states declined slightly from 1910 to 1920, the number of Mexicans living in Texas, California, and Arizona in 1910 was 188,697, and in 1920 it was 402,178, an increase of 213,481, or 113.1 per cent.

^{4a} As defined in subdivision (2) of section 3 of the Immigration Act of 1924, the term nonimmigrant includes the following: (1) a governmental official, his family, attendants, servants, and employees, (2) an alien visiting the United States temporarily as a tourist or temporarily for business or pleasure, (3) an alien in continuous transit through the United States, (4) an alien lawfully admitted to the United States who later goes in transit from one part of the United States to another through foreign contiguous territory, (5) a bona fide alien seaman serving as such on a vessel arriving at a port of the United States and seeking to enter temporarily the United States solely in the pursuit of his calling as a seaman, and (6) an alien entitled to enter the United States solely to carry on trade under and in pursuance of the provisions of a present existing treaty of commerce and navigation.

It will be noticed further in this table that while in 1900 the proportion of Mexicans residing in Texas was 68.7, in 1910 this percentage declined to 56.3, and in 1920 it further declined to 51.8. The proportion of the total Mexicans in the United States residing in Arizona remained practically the same from 1900 to 1920. But the number and proportion of Mexicans living in California has continuously increased. In 1900 of the total number of Mexicans in the United States, 8086, or 7.8 per cent, resided in California. This number increased to 33,694, or 15.2 per cent, in 1910, and rose to 88,771, or 18.2 per cent, of the total enumerated in 1920. From these data, therefore, it appears that California has been getting a disproportionate share of the total Mexican immigration into the United States.

In the following tabulation and in Chart 4 only the foreign-born Mexicans residing in Arizona, California, and Texas in 1900, 1910, and 1920 are considered.

In 1900 the total number of Mexicans residing in these three states was 93,320, or 90.3 per cent of the total in the United States. Of this total 76.1 per cent resided in Texas; 15.2 per cent in Arizona; and only 8.7 per cent in California.

But in 1920 the proportions of the total foreign-born Mexicans residing in these three states changed. While in 1900 Texas had 76.1 per cent of the total, in 1920 the proportion in Texas declined to 62.6.

Arizona, in 1900, had 15.2 per cent of the total in these three states, and in 1920 the Arizona proportion was nearly the same, namely, 15.3. But in 1900 California had only 8.7 per cent of the total Mexican residents in these three states, but this percentage increased to 17.9 in 1910, and to 22.1 in 1920

That the Mexican immigrant is drawn toward California in increasing numbers is also shown in the Table 10. A perusal of this table shows that the proportion of Mexican immigrants who declared California as their state of "intended future permanent residence" has been steadily increasing. In the three years from 1909-1911, this per cent was 3.8, but in the three years from 1924-1926 this ratio increased to 17.0. During the same period, the proportion of Mexican immigrants who declared Texas as their state of intended future permanent residence decreased from 83.6 in 1909-1911 to 64.3 in 1924-1926. Of the total number of immigrant alien Mexicans entering the United States during 1909-1911, 8.1 per cent declared Arizona to be their state of intended future permanent residence. This proportion increased to 19.2 in 1915-1918 and declined to 10.7 in 1924-1926.

The index numbers presented in Table 10 and Chart 5 demonstrate in another way that California has become the Mecca for an ever-growing number of Mexicans. Taking the three years 1909-1911 as the base period, it will be noticed that the number of immigrant alien Mexicans who declared California their state of intended future permanent residence increased 1305 per cent by 1924-1926, compared with 312 per cent for Arizona, 140 per cent for Texas, and 449 per cent for all other states.

Data available for two fiscal years, since the three-year period, 1924-1926, corroborate this preference of Mexican immigrants for the State of California. Thus, of the 124,531 alien Mexican immigrants who were admitted into the United States during the two fiscal years ended June 30, 1928, 9641, or 7.7 per cent, went to Arizona; 24,512, or 19.7 per cent, to California; and 77,629, or 62.3 per cent, to Texas.

Table 11, next following, also shows that the increase of Mexicans in California from 1900 to 1910 was greater in each decade than the corresponding increases in either Texas or Arizona. Thus, between 1900-1910 the percentage of increase in the Mexican population of California was 316.7, while between 1910-1920 this percentage of increase was 163.5. In Texas the increase in the Mexican population was 75.9 per cent between 1900-1910 and 101.4 per cent between 1910-1920. In Arizona this increase was 111.6 per cent between 1900-1910 and 105.3 per cent between 1910-1920.

FROM TEXAS INTO CALIFORNIA

The preceding tables 9, 10 and 11 show that California has been getting an increasing number of the Mexican immigration as compared with the states of Arizona and Texas. But Table 10 showed that during the three fiscal years ended June 30, 1927, the percentages of Mexicans designating Arizona, California and Texas as the states of their intended future permanent residence were, respectively, 10.7, 17.0, and 64.3. It is interesting and pertinent to inquire whether the Mexican immigrants actually remain in the states of their intended permanent residence.⁷

It would appear from the data in the following tabulation and in Chart 6, that Mexican immigrants find their way from the State of Texas into the State of California.

States of residence	Number in 1910, United States census	"Intended future permanent residence" of Mexicans in 10 years 1911-1920	Possible maximum total in 1920	Actual number in 1920, United States census	Difference between possible number in 1920

Thus, according to United States census data the number of persons born in Mexico and residing in California in 1910 was 33,694. Between 1911-1920, ten years, 16,864 immigrant alien Mexicans declared that the State of California was their state of intended future permanent residence. Assuming that they all entered the United States through California and that they all remained in California, then the possible maximum number of Mexicans in California in 1920 could not have been in excess of 50,558. But instead of this number the United States census of 1920 counted 88,771 Mexicans in California, which is 38,213, or 75.6 per cent, greater than the possible maximum total that could be expected in California in 1920, when the census was taken.⁸

The foregoing tabulation also shows an excess of 5832 for the State of Arizona and a shortage of 19,767 for the State of Texas. While these data are by no means exact, they nevertheless strongly suggest that the Mexicans filter from Texas into California and that in the process of filtration many settle in New Mexico and in Arizona.⁹

⁹ Table 8 shows that in 1910 the number of Mexicans in New Mexico was 11,918, while in 1920 it was 20,272, an increase of 8354, or 70.1 per cent.

SUMMARY

The facts and figures presented and analyzed in this chapter may be summarized as follows:

1. The two per cent quota restriction law of 1924 gave preference to immigrants from countries of northern and western Europe as against immigrants from countries of southern and eastern Europe.

2. While the two per cent law definitely limits the number of admissible immigrant aliens from European countries, it practically places no limitation upon the admission of immigrants from countries in the western hemisphere, including the Republic of Mexico.

3. In the case of Mexican immigration there is a sharp distinction between the number of reported immigrants and the actual number admitted. The former come in legally. The latter come in illegally. The reports of the Commissioner General of Immigration show the number who come in legally. The actual number of immigrants would include also those who come in illegally.

4. Between 1900 and 1920, conservatively estimated, about 200,000 Mexicans entered this country illegally.

5. The rush of immigration from Mexico began during the World War period and was undoubtedly caused by the then prevailing shortage of labor (Table 1).

6. During the three fiscal years during which the three per cent quota law operated, reported immigration from Mexico into the United States increased from 18,246 in 1922 to 87,648 in 1924, from 5.9 per cent of the total immigration in 1922 to 12.4 per cent of the total immigration in 1924 (Table 2).

7. During the three fiscal years during which the two per cent quota law has been in operation, Mexican immigration increased from 32,378 in 1925 to 57,765 in 1928, or from 11.0 per cent of the total immigration in 1925 to 18.8 per cent of the total immigration in 1928 (Table 3).

8. The big decrease in Mexican immigration in 1925 is accounted for by the fact that 1925 was the first year following the adoption of the visa requirements and the visa fee of $10.

9. The Mexican immigrant is taking place of the immigrant from southern and eastern Europe and is coming into the United States in larger numbers than any other immigrant European race (Table 5).

10. Under the present quota restriction law, over two-fifths of all alien immigrants who declare California as their state of "intended future permanent residence" are Mexicans. In other words, under the present immigration laws, the Mexican is the principal immigrant race coming to California (Table 6).

11. The official data on Mexican emigration are incomplete. They do not show the actual numbers of emigrating Mexicans. Since the same is true of the figures relating to immigrant Mexicans, it appears from the data in Table 7 that Mexicans come into the United States to stay rather than to return to their native land after a sojourn in this country. This fact is also corroborated by a comparison between the numbers of Mexicans in the United States at each decennial period since 1870 with the known numbers of Mexican immigrants and emigrants.

12. There are undoubtedly over 1,000,000 Mexicans in the United States at the present time. Under the present immigration laws this number may be added to without limit.

13. Over four-fifths of the total number of Mexicans residing in the United States in 1920 lived in the three states of Texas, California, and Arizona (Table 9).

14. The proportion of Mexicans living in California increased from 7.8 per cent of the total in the United States in 1900, to 15.2 per cent in 1910, and to 18.2 per cent in 1920 (Table 9).

15. Considering only the total Mexicans residing in the three states of Arizona, California, and Texas, it is a fact that the proportion of this total residing in California rose from 8.7 in 1900 to 17.9 in 1910, and to 22.1 in 1920. During the same period, the proportion of this total residing in Texas declined from 76.1 in 1900 to 66.2 in 1910, and to 62.6 in 1920. The proportion of this total residing in Arizona remained about the same from 1900-1920.

16. While of the total immigrant alien Mexicans admitted during the three years 1909-1912, 3.8 per cent designated California as their state of intended future permanent residence, during the three years 1924-1927, 17.0 per cent designated California as their state of intended future permanent residence (Table 10).

17. The proportion of immigrant alien Mexicans who declared California as their state of intended future permanent residence increased 1305 per cent from 1909-1912 to 1924-1927 (Table 10).

18. Between the decades 1900 to 1910 and 1910 to 1920, California had a very much greater increase in Mexican population than either of the states of Texas or Arizona (Table 11).

19. A comparison between census data and statistics of immigration strongly suggests that the Mexican immigrants filter into California from Texas, and that in the process of filtration many settle in New Mexico and in Arizona.

CHAPTER II

THE FOREIGN-BORN POPULATION OF CALIFORNIA

In the analysis of the effects of the quota restriction laws, presented in the preceding chapter, it was pointed out that California has become the Mecca for increasing numbers of Mexicans and that of the alien immigrants now coming to California over two-fifths are Mexicans.¹ The relation of the Mexican population to the total population and to the total foreign-born population of California, and the number and distribution of Mexicans in California, are important aspects of the Mexican immigration question which are discussed in the present chapter.

RACIAL COMPOSITION OF THE POPULATION OF MEXICO

In dealing with the Mexican immigration problem in its relation to the population of California, it seems desirable to inquire as to the racial composition of the Mexican people. The third census of the Republic of Mexico, taken in 1910, established a population of 15,160,369. This figure is cited by Robert E. Foerster, professor of economics in Princeton University, in his report to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization of the House of Representatives.² Professor Foerster said the following regarding the racial composition of the population of Mexico:

"From the survey which has been given of the population of Mexico it must be plain that the pure Spanish element is small, that the century which brought many millions of white immigrants to the United States brought very few immigrants even of Spanish origin to Mexico, and that the basic race of the country is Indian, either pure-blooded or mixed with white stock. Common estimates of the pure Indian stock place it at five or six millions; of the white stock at one and one-half to less than three millions (for the higher figure there is very little warrant); of the mestizo stock about seven or eight millions. If the smaller estimate for the Indian stock is preferred, the larger must be taken for the mestizo. Of the mestizo stock a part is half Indian and half white, another part is more than half white and less than half Indian, and still another part is more than half Indian and less than half white. Since the pure Indian stock greatly outnumbers the pure white it is safe to infer that that part of the mestizo which is more than half Indian greatly exceeds that part which is more than half white."³

In his study on "Mexican Labor in the United States, Migration Statistics,"⁴ Dr. Paul S. Taylor gives the following figures showing the racial composition of the native-born population of Mexico in 1921:

¹ Of the 49,937 alien immigrants admitted into the United States during the two fiscal years ended June 30, 1923, who declared California as their state of intended future permanent residence, 24,512, or 49.6 per cent were Mexicans.

*Resumen del censo general de habitantes de 30 de noviembre de 1921, Departamento de la Estadística Nacional (Mexico, 1928), page 62.

It will be seen that of the total population of 14,334,780, only 1,404,718, or 9.8 per cent, were classified as whites; Mestizos were 59.3 per cent of the total; and Indians were 29.2 per cent of the total. These data are shown graphically in Chart 7, following.

The United States Immigration Commission of 1910 described the Mexican population as "mainly of Indian or mixed origin" and that "less than 20 per cent of the people of Mexico are of pure white blood."⁵ According to Professor Foerster the Mexican stock "is likely to become even more characteristically one of mixed blood than it has been."⁶

Dr. George P. Clements, director of the agricultural department of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, estimates that about 13,000,000 of the 15,000,000 Mexicans in Mexico are "made up of hundreds of distinct Indian tribes as primitive as our own Indians were when the first colonists arrived in America."⁷ According to Dr. Clements, these are the Mexicans who are known as peons and who immigrate into the United States.

It is generally conceded that the bulk of the immigration from Mexico into the United States is from the pure Indian or the Mestizo stock of the Mexican population.

ESTIMATED NUMBER OF MEXICANS IN CALIFORNIA

Numerous and diverse estimates have been made as to the number of Mexicans at present living in California. The fact is that there is no accurate information available on this subject, and no reliable data will probably be had on this point until the results of the next decennial census are published by the Bureau of the Census of the United States Department of Commerce. In the meantime, all estimates as to the number of Mexicans in the United States or in California, in the absence of an actual enumeration, must be more in the nature of guesses.

It would be unwise and thoroughly fallacious to attempt to estimate the number of Mexicans residing in California at the present time by adding the total or net immigration into California to the total number of Mexicans who resided in California in 1920.⁸ These figures would not take into account for migrations from Texas, or other states into California, nor for migrations of Mexicans from California into other states.

One method of estimating the number of Mexicans now residing in California is to assume that the per cent of increase in the Mexican population in this state between 1920 and 1928 has been the same as between 1910 and 1920, namely, 163.5 per cent. Since the Mexican population in 1920 in California was 88,771, an increase of 163.5 per cent between 1920 and 1930 would place the number of Mexicans in California in 1930 at 233,912.

The absolute and percentage increases or decreases in the Mexican population in California from 1880 to 1920 are shown in the following tabulation, and in Chart 8. It will be noticed that between 1880-1890 there was a decrease of 1484 persons in California who were born in Mexico, but that since 1890 the Mexican population in California increased considerably. The greatest percentage increase reported was for the decade 1900-1910.

Another way of estimating the present Mexican population of California is to assume that the increase in the Mexican population in each county of the state between 1920 and 1930 will be the same as was the increase of Mexican population in each county between 1910 and 1920. Table 12 shows the estimated Mexican population for each of California counties, and for the state as a whole as of 1930, on this basis.

According to the estimates presented in this table, Los Angeles County should have, by 1930, 95,953 Mexicans. This estimate appears conservative and is probably lower than is the present Mexican population in Los Angeles.

An estimate of the Mexican population in Imperial County, as of February 1, 1927, based upon the Mexican school population of that county, was made by Dr. Paul S. Taylor in his recent study on Mexican Labor in the United States Imperial Valley.⁹ According to this estimate the Mexican population of Imperial County as of February 1, 1927, was 20,000. This "conservative estimate" is about 8000 less than the estimate for Imperial County submitted in Table 12. But since the present estimate is for 1930 it does not appear to be in conflict with the estimate made by Dr. Taylor.

⁸ Data on net increase in population due to excess of immigration over emigration are not published by the Commissioner General of Immigration for individual states.

⁹ "Mexican Labor in the United States Imperial Valley," by Paul S. Taylor, University of California Publications in Economics, Volume 6, No. 1, 1928, p. 18.

*It will be noticed that while this table gives the total number of Mexicans in California in 1920 as 86,610, the preceding tabulation shows that the total number of Mexicans in California in 1920 was 88,771. Both are census figures, but the smaller figure refers to "foreign born whites," while the higher figure refers to "foreign-born," whites and nonwhites. In order to get comparable figures, it was necessary to use either foreign-born whites or foreign-born in the various tables presented in this report.

This is the total of the estimated 1930 Mexican population in each county. If the number of Mexicans in California in 1920 were multiplied by 159 per cent, the estimated number in the state in 1930 would be 224,320.

Judging by the figures presented in Table 12, it would appear that the present Mexican population in California is roughly in the neighborhood of 250,000.

COUNTRIES OF BIRTH OF THE FOREIGN-BORN

Increases or decreases in the foreign-born population are, of course, entirely dependent upon net immigration; that is, upon the difference between immigration and emigration of foreign-born persons and upon deaths. The quota restriction laws, as was seen in the preceding chapter, did not go into effect until June 3, 1921; and between 1910-1920 the major force controlling the tides and recesses of immigration was the World War.

In 1910 the Mexicans were 1.4 per cent of the total population and 6.5 per cent of the total foreign-born whites of California. But in 1920 the Mexicans were 2.5 per cent of the total population and 12.7 per cent of the total foreign-born whites in California. In 1910 the foreign-born whites were 21.8 per cent of the total population of California, and in 1920 they were 19.9 per cent of the total population of California.

But, as will be seen in Table 13, the countries of birth of the foreign-born population in California in 1920 were notably different from those in 1910. Thus, in 1910, the foreign-born whites born in Germany, Italy, Ireland, and England constituted 46.6 per cent of the total foreign-born white population in California. In 1920 the foreign whites born in these countries were only 38.2 per cent of the total. In 1910 the foreign-born whites born in Mexico¹⁰ were 6.5 per cent of the total foreign-born whites, while in 1920 they were 12.7 per cent of this total.

¹⁰ The Mexicans are classified as whites by the United States census.
4-76146

Between 1910 and 1920 the number of foreign-born whites born in England increased 20.4 per cent; those born in Italy increased 39.2 per cent; those born in Ireland decreased 13.7 per cent, and those born in Germany decreased 12.0 per cent. During this decade the increase in the number of foreign-born persons residing in California but born in Mexico was greatest, namely, 53,166, or 159 per cent.¹¹ The total increase in the number of foreign-born persons residing in California but born in Mexico was 32.3 per cent of the total increase in the number of all foreign-born whites during 1910-1920. This period, as we have seen, marked the beginning of the influx of Mexican immigration into California.

Additional facts concerning the changes in the composition of the foreign-born population of California will be gained by a perusal of the data contained in Table 14. In this table and in Chart 9 are shown only the principal countries of birth of foreign-born, including whites and others, in California, from 1900 to 1920.

While the total increase in the total foreign-born population in California between 1900-1910 was 59.7 per cent, the increase in the number of Mexicans was 316.7 per cent. This was the largest percentage increase reported during this decade. The Japanese showed the next highest percentage increase. During the next decade the percentage increase in the total foreign-born population of California was 29.2; whereas the increase in number of persons born in Mexico was 163.5, the highest percentage increase recorded during the decade.

In Table 14 is shown also a decrease in the number of Chinese during the decade 1910-1920, which was not shown in Table 13, which related only to foreign-born whites.

Of the thirteen principal countries of birth of foreign-born in California enumerated in Table 14, the proportion which those born in Germany, Ireland, China, England, Canada, France, Switzerland, and Scotland, were in the total foreign-born in the state declined between 1900-1920. The proportion which those born in Italy, Japan, and Mexico are in the total foreign-born in the state increased during the same twenty years, and the largest increase is shown for those born in Mexico. Thus, while in 1900 the Mexicans were 2.2 per cent of the total foreign-born in California, in 1920 they were 11.7 of the total foreign-born.

The average annual increase in the total foreign-born population of California between 1900-1910 was 21,919. During the next decade, 1910-1920, this average annual increase was only 17,119; that is, during this decade the annual average increase in the number of foreign-born in California decreased by 4800, or 21.9 per cent, compared with the preceding decade. But the average annual increment in the number of Mexicans increased from 560 between 1900-1910 to 5507 between 1910-1920, an increase of 2947, or 115 per cent.

The fact that while the rate of increase in the total foreign-born in California decreased between 1900-1910 and 1910-1920 the rate of increase in the foreign-born Mexicans increased during the same decades, coupled with the fact that under the present quota restriction laws about half of the total immigrants coming into California are Mexicans, is very significant as regards the future composition of the foreign-born population of California. If the federal immigration laws will continue to give preference to Mexican immigrants, Mexicans are likely to become the most preponderant foreign-born people in California as compared with immigrants from European countries.

DISTRIBUTION OF MEXICANS BY COUNTIES

The numerical and percentage distribution of Mexicans in California counties is shown in Table 15 and Chart 10, next presented. In 1920 the first twelve counties listed in this table had 87.7 per cent of all the Mexican residents in California. In 1910 these twelve counties had 86.5 per cent of all Mexicans in the state.

An examination of Table 15 shows that the following ten southern counties of California had, in 1910 and in 1920, 78 per cent of the total Mexican population in the state.

The distribution of Mexicans in California by counties, as of October, 1927, is indicated in Table 16 and Chart 11, which is based upon the census of minors, under eighteen years of age, taken by the California State Board of Education as of that date.

This table supports the fact that the county distribution of Mexicans is now about the same as it was in 1920. The same ten southern counties, shown in the preceding tabulation, which, in 1920, had 78 per cent of all California Mexicans, had 79.2 per cent of all Mexican children as of October, 1927. Again, the same twelve counties which ranked highest as regards their total Mexican population in 1920, shown in Table 15, were also the counties which ranked highest in October, 1927, as regards their highest number of Mexican children. In 1920 these counties had 87.7 per cent of the total Mexican population in California, and in October, 1927, they had 87.9 per cent of the total Mexican minors under eighteen years.

INCREASE OF MEXICANS BY COUNTIES

It was already shown above that between 1910 and 1920 the number of foreign-born white Mexicans in California increased from 33,444 to 86,610, or 159 per cent.¹² Table 17 and Chart 12 show that this increase was not at all uniform throughout the state, and that in several counties of the state the increases in the Mexican population were much greater than in the remaining counties. The percentages of ¹² These figures refer to foreign-born whites born in Mexico, as classified by U. S. census data.

In some counties which had less than 500 Mexican residents in 1910 the percentages of increase between 1910 and 1920 are greater than the percentage increase in the state as a whole. Thus, the percentage of increase in Alameda County was 217.5; in Sacramento, 295.3; in San Joaquin, 198.4; in Santa Barbara, 470.5; and in Stanislaus, 176.1.

INCREASE OF MEXICANS BY CITIES

It was thus far shown that the Mexicans tend to gather in several counties of the state and that the increase of Mexicans between 1910-1920 was by no means uniform throughout the state. It will be observed in Table 18 and Chart 13 that in the twenty California cities, each of which, in 1920, had a total population of 10,000 or more, the increase in Mexican population between 1910-1920 was 214.8 per cent. During the same period, it will be recalled, the increase in the state was only 159 per cent. The much greater percentage increase for the cities points to the conclusion that the Mexicans tend to concentrate in the cities in preference to the rural communities.

Considering the larger cities, we find that the number of Mexicans living in Los Angeles in 1910 was 5611, compared with 21,598 in 1920, an increase of 15,987, or 284.9 per cent. In San Francisco the increase during this period was 115.1 per cent; in Oakland the increase was 312 per cent; in San Diego the increase was 124.3 per cent; in Long Beach the increase was 269.7 per cent; in Fresno the increase was 236.2 per cent; in Stockton the increase was 288.8 per cent; and in Sacramento the increase was 368.9 per cent.

Data as to the increase in Mexican population in these cities between 1920-1930 will not be available until the publication of the federal census of 1930, but it appears reasonably safe to assume that this movement of Mexicans towards the cities will also be recorded in 1930.

CHART 13

PER CENT OF INCREASE IN THE NUMBER OF MEXICANS IN CALIFORNIA BETWEEN 1910-1920 COMPARED WITH THE PER CENT OF INCREASE IN THE NUMBER OF MEXICANS IN TWENTY CALIFORNIA CITIES DURING SAME PERIOD.

SUMMARY

The facts relating to the racial composition of the Mexican population, and to the number, increases, and distribution of the Mexican population in California presented in this chapter, may be summarized as follows:

1. The racial composition of the people of Mexico may be described as about 10 per cent white stock; 29 per cent pure Indian stock; and 59 per cent Mestizo stock (Chart 7).

2. Between 1910-1920 the number of foreign-born persons in California, born in Mexico, increased 163.5 per cent. During this decade the number of foreign-born whites in California born in Mexico increased 159 per cent.

3. The present Mexican population in California, estimated on the basis of the percentages of increase in each county between 1910-1920, is probably in the neighborhood of 250,000. This estimate is considered conservative (Table 12).

4. In 1910 the Mexicans were 6.5 per cent of the total foreign-born whites in the State of California; but in 1920 this proportion rose to 12.7 (Table 13).

5. The increase in the number of Mexicans between 1910-1920 in California was greater than the increase in the numbers of any other foreign people in California during the same decade (Table 13).

6. While the rate of increase in the total foreign-born in California decreased by 21.9 per cent between 1900-1910 and 1910-1920, the rate of increase in the foreign-born Mexicans increased during the same period by 115 per cent (Table 14).

7. If the federal immigration laws will continue to give preference to Mexican immigrants, Mexicans are likely to become the most preponderant foreign-born people in California as compared with immigrants from European countries.

8. In 1910 and in 1920 the ten southern counties of Imperial, Kern, Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, and Ventura had 78 per cent of the total Mexican population in California (Table 15).

9. These same ten southern counties had in October, 1927, 79.2 per cent of all Mexican children under eighteen years of age residing in California (Table 16).

10. While, between 1910-1920, the increase in the number of Mexicans in California, as a whole, was 159 per cent, the increases in the numbers of Mexicans in Fresno, Imperial, Ventura, Tulare, Los Angeles, Riverside, and Orange counties, in order named, were much greater than 159 per cent (Table 17).

11. While, between 1910-1920, the increase in the number of Mexicans in California, as a whole, was 159 per cent, the increase in the number of Mexicans in twelve California cities was, during the same decade, 214.8 per cent. In Los Angeles the increase was 284.9 per cent; in Oakland it was 312 per cent; in Sacramento it was 368.9 per cent; and in San Francisco the increase was 115.1 per cent (Table 18).

CHAPTER III

NATURALIZATION OF MEXICANS

IN THE UNITED STATES

In view of the large increase in Mexican immigration in recent years, it becomes an important question whether the immigrant alien from Mexico is likely to become Americanized to the extent of participating in the political life of the United States or of the state in which he settles. The immigrants who seek to become citizens of their country of choice are generally considered as more desirable from the standpoint of the political homogeneity and solidarity of the nation.

The federal census data show that in 1910 there were 102,009 foreign-born male Mexicans, twenty-one years of age and over, in the United States and that of this total 10,932, or 10.7 per cent, were naturalized. The corresponding percentage for the foreign-born males of all countries naturalized was 45.6. In 1920 the number of foreign-born male Mexicans, twenty-one years of age and over, was 189,974, of whom 6363, or 3.3 per cent, were naturalized. The corresponding percentage for the foreign-born males of all countries naturalized was 47.8. These figures show a decrease in the number and percentage of naturalized Mexican males, twenty-one years of age and over, from 1910 to 1920. In 1910, as shown, the number of naturalized Mexican males, twenty-one years of age and over, was 10,932; and in 1920 it was 6363, a decrease of 4569, or 42.0 per cent. This large decrease in the number of naturalized Mexican males in 1920 may be accounted for by the possibility that during the World War many naturalized Mexicans returned to their native land to avoid military service.

Prior to 1920 the census did not report citizenship status for both males and females, but in 1920 this information is given by the census. According to the census of that year, the total number of males and females, twenty-one years of age and over, in the United States, born in Mexico, was 319,697, of whom 17,624, or 5.5 per cent, were naturalized. The corresponding percentage naturalized among all foreign-born males and females, twenty-one years of age and over, in the United States in 1920 was 49.7.

Again, of the 478,383 foreign-born whites, males and females of all ages, born in Mexico but residing in the United States in 1920, 22,732, or 4.8 per cent, were naturalized. The corresponding percentage naturalized among all foreign-born in the United States in 1920 was 47.2.

The following figures, taken from the reports of the Commissioner of Naturalization of the United States Department of Labor, show the numbers of aliens, by nationalities, who were admitted to citizenship during the five fiscal years ended June 30, 1928.

The tabulation shows that the Mexicans were only one-tenth of one per cent of the total number of aliens admitted to citizenship during the five fiscal years considered. But in 1920 the total number of aliens, males and females, twenty-one years of age and over, was 4,364,909, of whom 285,122, or 6.5 per cent, were alien Mexicans. Even allowing for the relative inadequacy of these figures, the conclusion appears unavoidable that the proportion of Mexicans naturalized during these five fiscal years is much below the proportion which the Mexicans were of the total aliens in the United States during these five years.

It appears certain from the preceding tabulation that while the number of naturalized Mexicans will be greater in 1930 than it was in 1920, the percentage naturalized of the total foreign-born whites born in Mexico will be even lower in 1930 than it was in 1920. This supposition appears fully justified in view of the large increase of alien Mexicans in the United States since 1920 referred to in a preceding chapter of this report.

IN CALIFORNIA

The preceding data are for the country as a whole. The following tabulation shows the citizenship status of all foreign-born white males, twenty-one years of age and over, and of Mexican white males, twenty-one years of age and over, who resided in California in 1910 and in 1920.

Citizenship	Foreign-born males, 21 years of age and over
	Total foreign-born (exclusive of Mexicans)				Total Mexicans
	1910		1920		1910		1920
	Number	Per cent of total	Number	Per cent of total	Number	Per cent of total	Number	Per cent of total

Not reported.....	29,741	10.6	22,106	6.7	2,702	15.0	2,066	5.6

These figures, computed from the federal census data, show that between 1910-1920 the proportion of naturalized among foreign-born males, exclusive of Mexicans, increased from 48.8 to 50.0 per cent and that the corresponding proportion for Mexican males declined during the same period from 5.7 to 2.7 per cent.

It will be noted that while the number naturalized among the foreign-born, twenty-one years of age and over, exclusive of Mexicans, increased from 136,240 in 1910 to 165,294 in 1920, an increase of 29,054, or 21.3 per cent, the corresponding number of Mexican males, twenty-one years of age and over, decreased from 1034 in 1910 to 1005 in 1920, a decrease of 29, or 2.8 per cent.

Table 19 and Chart 14, next presented, show the citizenship status of foreign-born white males and females residing in California, in 1920, by countries of birth. A perusal of this table brings to light the interesting fact that of all the foreign-born whites, twenty-one years of age and over, who resided in California in 1920, the Mexicans showed the lowest percentage naturalized. Thus, while the percentage naturalized of all foreign-born whites, males and females, was 47.7, the corresponding percentage for the Mexicans was 4.9.

In Table 19 the number of Mexicans naturalized in 1920 is shown as 3008. This represents 1005 males and 2003 females. Corresponding data for 1910 are not available; but the fact that in 1920 the number of naturalized Mexican women was almost double the number of naturalized Mexican males seems to support the probability, already referred to, that many Mexican males who were naturalized between 1910 and 1920 had left the United States during the World War, probably to avoid military service.

Next to the Mexicans, the Spanish showed the lowest percentage naturalized, namely, 8.6 per cent of the total number of 8853 Spaniards who resided in California in 1920. The countries which showed percentages of naturalized in excess of 47.7 per cent, which was the percentage for all countries, were the following:

It must be remembered, in this connection, that the Mexican immigration in the United States is relatively new and that the average Mexican now in this country has been here a much shorter time than any of the peoples enumerated above, whose naturalization records are much higher than for the Mexicans.

FIRST AND FINAL CITIZENSHIP PAPERS

Among many other requirements of the law regarding naturalization of foreign-born is the one which provides for the declaration of one's intention to become a citizen, at least two years prior to his application for citizenship. The declaration of intention papers are known as the first papers; while the citizenship papers are referred to as the final papers.

An alien may declare his intention to become a citizen of the United States immediately upon his arrival, if he wishes to; but he may not apply for the final papers before two years have elapsed after securing the first papers.

The petitioner for the final papers must prove legal entry into the United States and must present two witnesses, citizens of the United States, to prove his uninterrupted residence in this country for five years and one year's residence in the state in which he applies. An alien who has declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States must file his petition for the final papers within seven years after securing his first papers; otherwise, the first papers become void, and the alien must again declare his intention to become a citizen.

In Table 20 are presented data showing the number of California aliens, by nationalities, who declared their intention to become citizens during the calendar year 1927.

It will be seen from this table and in Chart 15 that during the calendar year 1927, 13,165 aliens in California declared their intention to become citizens of the United States. Of this total 260, or 2 per cent, were aliens born in Mexico. While the average number of years all declarants resided in the United States before declaring their intentions was 10.5, the Mexican aliens resided in the United States 14.8 years before they declared their intention to become citizens. The nationalities of the declarants who resided in the United States longer than the Mexicans before they took out their first papers were these, in order named:

(A) Less than one-tenth of one per cent.

Of the thirty-eight nationalities listed in Table 20, twenty-nine nationalities had been in the United States a shorter time than the Mexicans before declaring their intentions to become citizens of this country. The Polish declarants had been in the United States 14.8 years, the same length of time as the Mexicans, before they declared their intention to become citizens of this country.

The following table (Table 21) shows the differences in the average number of years in the United States of all alien declarants, Mexican and others, and of alien Mexican declarants, by counties, in which there were Mexican and other declarants.

It will be seen in Table 21 and Chart 16 that the total number of declarants in Los Angeles County was 4846, of whom 149, or 3.1 per cent, were Mexican declarants. In 1920 the Mexicans were 20.2 per cent of the total foreign-born whites in Los Angeles County, and in 1927 this percentage was undoubtedly greater. The average number of years in the United States of all aliens who declared their intention to become citizens in Los Angeles County was 9.4, compared with 14.5 years for the alien Mexicans.

In San Francisco County the total number of declarants was 3768, of whom 38, or 1 per cent, were Mexicans. In 1920 the Mexicans were 2.7 per cent of the total foreign born whites in San Francisco County. In this county the average number of years in the United States of all aliens who declared their intention to become citizens was 10.4, compared with 14.3 years for the alien Mexicans.

The same comparisons for the other counties shown in Table 21 are not so significant, because of the small numbers of Mexicans in those counties.

Table 22, next following, shows how long the declarants were in the United States before taking out their first papers, by counties in which the declarations of intention were made.

It will be seen that there is considerable difference, as between counties, in the average number of years the declarants of intention were in the United States. Thus, in Fresno County, 287 declarants were 15.3 years in the United States before applying for the first papers; while in San Diego County, with 288 declarants, the average number of years was 12. The 229 declarants in Contra Costa County were in this country 10.8 years at the time of declaring their intention to become citizens; whereas, the 247 declarants in Santa Clara County were in the United States 11.4 years before taking out the first papers.

(A) Less than one-tenth of one per cent.

One of the striking points presented in the preceding tables is the small total number of alien Mexicans who declared their intention to become citizens of the United States during the calendar year 1927. Data are not available as to the total percentage which the Mexicans were of the total foreign-born in California in 1927, but in 1920 this percentage was 12.7.¹ Still of the total number of 13,165 declarants in 1927, the number of Mexicans was only 260, or 2 per cent. These percentages indicate clearly that the Mexicans lag far behind the foreign-born, as a whole, in their expressed intentions to become citizens of the United States.

As already pointed out above, an alien must prove that he entered this country legally when he applies for the final citizenship papers. But since the large numbers of Mexicans who entered this country illegally will not be able to prove their legal admission into the United States, they are automatically prevented from becoming citizens of this country.

Americanization teachers in California frequently comment upon the fact that few Mexicans ever become American citizens, even after securing their first papers. The Mexicans are described as proud of their country of birth and slow to assimilate.

The fact that the interval between the arrival of the alien and his declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States varies considerably in California counties, as shown in Table 22, suggests the probability that not all counties are as diligent in their efforts to Americanize their alien residents. Undoubtedly, the willingness, or urge, to become citizens is a matter which can be developed in aliens largely by the attitude of the natives surrounding them. The fact that in many localities in California the Mexicans are prevented from living in the same districts with natives, or with already assimilated groups of foreign-born, is militating against Americanization efforts. The same is true of the social isolation to which Mexicans are subjected in many communities and to which reference is made elsewhere in this report. We should not expect the Mexicans to be eager to become citizens when they are made to feel that they are persons with whom we do not desire to associate.

Whatever the causes are for the apparent lack of interest on the part of Mexicans to become citizens of the United States, the fact is significant because under the present federal immigration quota laws about half of the aliens who are now coming to California are Mexicans.

SUMMARY

The statistics presented in this chapter, relating to the naturalization of Mexicans in the United States and in the State of California are summarized below:

1. While in 1910, 10.7 per cent of all male Mexicans in the United States, twenty-one years of age and over, were naturalized, in 1920 this proportion declined to 3.3.

2. Not only was there a decline in the percentage of Mexicans naturalized between 1910-1920, but the number of Mexicans naturalized decreased between 1910-1920 by 42 per cent.

3. In 1920 the percentage naturalized of all foreign-born males, twenty-one years of age and over, in the United States was 47.8, compared with 3.3 per cent of Mexicans naturalized.

¹ It may be safely assumed that in 1927 the percentage which the Mexicans were of the total foreign-born in the state was considerably greater.

4. Considering both males and females, twenty-one years of age and over, the federal census of 1920 shows that among the Mexicans the percentage naturalized was 5.5, compared with the corresponding percentage of 49.7 for all foreign-born.

5. Of the total number of aliens admitted to United States citizenship during five fiscal years ended June 30, 1928, only one-tenth of one per cent were Mexicans. In 1920 the alien male and female Mexicans, twenty-one years of age and over, were 6.5 per cent of the total aliens twenty-one years of age and over residing in the United States.

6. Judging by the data presented, it appears certain that while the number of naturalized Mexicans will be somewhat greater in 1930 than in 1920, the ratio of naturalized Mexicans of the total alien Mexicans in the United States will be lower in 1930 than it was in 1920.

7. Of the total foreign-born males, twenty-one years of age and over, exclusive of Mexicans, residing in California in 1910 the percentage naturalized was 48.8, compared with the corresponding percentage of 5.7 per cent for the Mexicans.

8. Of the total foreign-born males, twenty-one years of age and over, exclusive of Mexicans, residing in California in 1920, the percentage naturalized was 50, compared with the corresponding percentage for Mexicans of 2.7.

9. While the number naturalized between 1910-1920 of the foreign-born males, twenty-one years of age and over, exclusive of Mexicans, residing in California, increased 21.3 per cent, the number naturalized of the corresponding group of Mexicans decreased during the same period 2.8 per cent.

10. Of all the foreign-born whites, males and females, twenty-one years of age and over, who resided in California in 1920, 47.7 per cent were naturalized, compared with the corresponding percentage of 4.9 for Mexican males and females, twenty-one years of age and over, residing in California in 1920. Of the total foreign-born in California in 1920, the Mexicans showed the lowest percentage naturalized (Table 19).

11. The fact that the number of naturalized Mexicans in the United States and in California decreased between 1910-1920, and the fact that in 1920 the number of naturalized Mexican women in California was nearly double the number of naturalized Mexican men, lends support to the supposition that during the World War many naturalized Mexicans left the United States in order to avoid military service.

12. It must be remembered in connection with these figures of naturalization that the Mexicans are a relatively new immigrant group in the United States and that, therefore, their average length of residence in this country is undoubtedly lower than for most other immigrant groups. This factor accounts in some measure for the smaller percentage of Mexicans naturalized in the United States, as a whole, or in the State of California.

13. During the calendar year 1927, 13,165 aliens residing in California declared their intention to become citizens of the United States. Of this total only 2 per cent were born in Mexico. In 1920 the foreign-born Mexicans were 12.7 per cent of the total foreign-born residing in California, and this percentage was most likely even greater in 1927.

14. In Los Angeles County, in 1927, 4846 foreign-born persons declared their intention to become citizens of the United States. Of this total, 149, or only 3.1 per cent, were Mexicans (Table 21). In 1920 the Mexicans were 20.2 per cent of the total foreign-born whites in Los Angeles, and in 1927 this proportion was undoubtedly greater.

15. The Mexican declarants lived on the average 14.8 years in the United States before declaring their intention to become citizens, while the declarants of all nationalities, Mexican and non-Mexican, lived 10.5 years in the United States before declaring their intention to become citizens (Table 22).

16. The fact that the interval between the arrival of the alien into the United States and his declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States varies considerably between California counties, suggests the probability that not all counties are as diligent in their efforts to Americanize their alien residents.

17. When petitioning for final citizenship papers an alien is required to prove his legal admission into the United States. But since large numbers of Mexicans have entered this country illegally, they will not be able to comply with this requirement and will therefore remain aliens.

18. Whatever the causes for the apparent reluctance of Mexicans to become citizens of the United States, the fact is significant because under the present federal immigration quota laws about half of the aliens now coming to California are Mexicans.

CHAPTER IV

MEXICANS IN NONAGRICULTURAL OCCUPATIONS

IN MANUFACTURING ESTABLISHMENTS

To ascertain to what extent Mexicans are employed in industrial establishments in California, the Fact-Finding Committee sent out 975 questionnaires to as many firms.¹ These schedules asked employers of labor to answer questions regarding (1) total number of employees as of May 15, 1928; (2) total number of Mexicans employed; (3) whether Mexicans and other nationalities, including Americans, were employed in the same occupations; (4) whether the same wage rates were paid Mexicans and others in the same occupations; (5) the occupations at which Mexicans were employed; and (6) the wage rates paid to Mexican workers. The schedules also called for comment regarding the relative desirability of Mexican workers.

It was not intended to get through these schedules a census of the actual number of Mexicans employed in manufacturing establishments. Rather was it the purpose to learn in which industries Mexicans have found employment and to get an inkling of the extent to which Mexicans have become a part of the labor supply in the manufacturing establishments of California.

Replies were received from 830 firms of the total number of 975 schedules sent out. Fifty-seven of the returned schedules could not be tabulated for lack of adequate information. Of the remaining 773 tabulatable returns, 40 schedules were received from canning and preserving of fish, fruit, and vegetable establishments; and 16 were received from railroad companies. The 56 replies from the canning and railroad plants were used in the separate sections on the employment of Mexicans in these establishments appearing in this chapter. The information gathered from the replies of the remaining 695 industrial establishments are presented below.

Table 23 shows that of the total number of 695 industrial establishments, 312, or 45 per cent, employed Mexicans; while 383 establishments, or 55 per cent, did not employ Mexicans. The groups of industries which reported Mexican employees in excess of the percentages for all industries were the following, in order named:

Group of industries	Per cent of total firms reporting Mexican employees
1. Textiles	57.9
2. Chemicals, oils and paints.....	56.7
3. Wood manufacturers	46.7
4. Metals, machinery, and conveyances	45.8

Table 24 shows the total number of employees, Mexicans and others, and the number of Mexicans employed by the industrial establishments for which information was secured. The percentages which the Mexican workers were of the total workers in these establishments are also shown in this table and in the accompanying chart.

It will be observed that the 695 industrial plants employed a total of 111,736 workers as of May 15, 1928, or the nearest representative pay roll period.² The total number of Mexican workers in these establishments was 12,113, or 10.8 per cent, of the total number of 111,736 workers.

The highest ratio of Mexicans to the total number of employees is reported by the stone, clay, and glass products firms, which include cement plants. The 47 reporting firms in this group of industries employed a total of 7172 workers, of whom 2657, or 38.4 per cent, were Mexicans. Besides the water, light, and power plants, the next highest proportion of Mexicans is reported by the textile industry. Thus, the nineteen firms in this industry reported a total of 2488 workers, of whom 393, or 15.8 per cent, were Mexicans. The metals, machinery, and conveyances group of industries employed a total of 24,143 workers. Of this total 2652, or 11.0 per cent, were Mexican workers. The 120 wood manufacturing firms employed 24,487 workers, of whom 2147, or 8.8 per cent, were Mexicans. The clothing, millinery, laundering, and the foods, beverages and tobacco groups of industries reported Mexican employees slightly in excess of 10 per cent of their total employees.

² Information was not secured as to number of male and female workers employed in industrial establishments.

It was shown in the preceding table that the 695 industrial establishments, for which information was secured, whether employing or not employing Mexicans, had a total of 111,736 workers as of May 15, 1928, and that of this total 12,113, or 10.8 per cent, were Mexican workers, employed in 312 establishments.

Table 25 and Chart 18 relate only to the 312 plants which reported both Mexican and non-Mexican workers. These establishments employed altogether 70,699 wage earners, of whom 12,113, or 17.1 per cent, were Mexican workers.

Thus, the 38 firms in the stone, clay, and glass industries employed 2657 Mexican workers of a total of 6621 employees; that is, two-fifths of their total wage earners were Mexicans. The 11 textile establishments reported 393, or 20 per cent, Mexicans of their total number of 1961 employees. The 26 clothing, millinery, and laundering establishments employed 831 Mexican workers, or 18.5 per cent of their total number of 4493 employees. The metals, machinery, and conveyances and the foods, beverages, and tobacco groups of industries reported 17.2 per cent Mexican workers of their total number of employees. Of the total number of 16,882 employees in the wood manufacturing industries, 2147, or 12.7 per cent, were Mexicans. The lowest percentages of Mexican workers are shown for the leather and rubber goods industries and for the chemicals, oils, and paints industries. The percentages of Mexicans employed in these groups of industries were, respectively, 8 and 6.5.

In the foregoing tables were presented data showing the employment of Mexicans and non-Mexicans in principal groups of industries. The figures in Table 26 are intended to show the numbers and proportions of Mexicans employed in certain industries which employed most Mexicans. In this table are shown the total numbers of employees of all nationalities, including the Mexicans, the total number of Mexicans, as well as the ratios of Mexicans to total workers employed in the industries included under the general headings of (1) stone, clay, and glass products, (2) metals, machinery, and conveyances, (3) wood manufactures, (4) clothing, millinery, and lumbering, and (5) foods, beverages, and tobacco. While the number of Mexicans employed by all groups of industries was 12,113, these five groups of industries employed 9916 workers of that nationality, or 82 per cent of the total.

An examination of the data embodied in Table 26 reveals that the largest percentages of Mexicans were employed in these industries, in order named:

Further analysis of the data relating to the employment of Mexicans in California industries discloses the interesting fact that most of the Mexicans are employed in establishments having large numbers of workers. Thus, reference to Table 27 and Chart 19 will show that 33.1 per cent of all Mexican industrial workers reported were on the pay rolls of 11 establishments employing 200 or more workers. Of the total number of firms which had Mexican employees, 193, or 61.9 per cent, employed only 12.4 per cent of all Mexicans reported. About 53 per cent of all Mexican workers were employed by 92.6 per cent of all firms reporting employees of that nationality in industrial plants having less than 125 employees; while 47 per cent of all Mexican workers were employed by 7.4 per cent of all firms, in factories employing 125 or more workers.

The fact that Mexican workers are employed in the bigger industrial plants is corroborated by the data presented in Table 28. This table shows that of the 111,736 employees in the 695 reporting establishments 70,699, or 63.3 per cent, were employed in places having Mexican workers; while 41,037, or 36.7 per cent, were employed in establishments having no Mexican employees. Of the total number of 7172 workers in the stone, clay, and glass industries, 6621, or 92.3 per cent, were employed in establishments employing Mexicans, and only 551, or 7.7 per cent, were employed by firms having no Mexican employees. Similarly, of the 24,143 workers reported by all firms in the metals, machinery, and conveyances industries, 15,445, or 64 per cent, were employed in factories employing Mexicans; while 8698, or 36 per cent, were employed in factories not employing Mexicans.

In all groups of industries, with one exception, shown in Table 28, the largest proportions of workers were in establishments which employed Mexican workers. The exception is that of the printing and paper goods industry. Of the total number of 9056 employees in this group of industries, 6529, or 72.1 per cent, were employed in places having no Mexican workers; while only 2527, or 27.9 per cent of all employees were employed in places having Mexican workers. Apparently, in the industries comprised in this group, the Mexicans were employed in the smaller establishments.

Table 29 shows the numbers and percentages which the Mexican employees were of the total employees in the principal counties. Thus, it will be observed that, in Los Angeles County, 173 establishments employed 6901 Mexicans, or 56.9 per cent, of the 12,113 Mexican employees reported by all counties. In these establishments the ratio of Mexican workers to the total workers was 20.8 per cent.

The main results of this table are to bring out the facts that the proportion of Mexican employees in Los Angeles County alone was more than one-half of the total number of Mexican factory employees reported, and to corroborate the fact, already referred to, that in the industrial establishments where Mexicans are employed they constitute a substantial proportion of the total employees.

TOTAL MEXICANS IN INDUSTRIES

From the data presented in the foregoing tables, an attempt might be made to estimate roughly the total number of Mexicans employed in California manufacturing industries. Since the figures secured from 695 manufacturing establishments covered 111,736 wage earners, or 42.5 per cent of the 262,936 wage earners in all California manufacturing establishments in 1927, the facts gathered from these establishments regarding the number of Mexicans employed by them might be considered also typical of all the manufacturing establishments in the state.³ In sending out the questionnaires to manufacturing establishments, no attempt was made to select industries or places of employment where most Mexicans were likely to be found. Instead, these questionnaires, as already explained, were sent out to a representative number of firms which are regularly reporting statistics of employment and pay roll to the Division of Labor Statistics and Law Enforcement.

³ According to the 1927 federal census of manufactures, the average number of wage earners in California in that year was 262,936.

It was seen (Table 24) that of the 111,736 wage earners in the reporting factories, 12,113, or 10.8 per cent, were Mexicans. Applying the same ratio to the total number of wage earners in manufacturing establishments in the state, it would appear that the total number of Mexicans in California manufacturing establishments is 28,397, or roughly, in the neighborhood of 28,000.

IN FRUIT AND VEGETABLE CANNERIES

The data presented in the foregoing tables did not include the canning of fruit and vegetable industry. The Fact-Finding Committee undertook to get a complete enumeration of the Mexicans employed in this industry. This was accomplished with the aid of the auditors of the Division of Industrial Welfare of the Department of Industrial Relations, who visited all canning plants during the canning season to insure the maintenance of the minimum wage rates established under the California minimum wage law.

As a result of this canvass complete returns were secured from 89 canneries which employed 50,404 workers, males and females, as of August 11, 1928.⁴ Of this total number of workers, as will be seen in Table 30, 2700, or 5.4 per cent, were Mexican; and of the total Mexican employees 985, or 36.5 per cent, were males and 1715, or 63.5 per cent, were females.

It is significant to note that while only about 5.4 per cent of the workers in all canneries were Mexican, in some counties this proportion was much higher. In Los Angeles County, for instance, where many Mexicans are concentrated, 258, or 23.5 per cent of the 1098 workers employed in three canneries, were Mexicans. In San Bernardino County the proportion of Mexican cannery workers was 16.3. The next two counties showing the highest ratios of Mexican workers were Sacramento and Alameda. In the Sacramento canneries the ratio of Mexicans was 10.2; while in the Alameda canneries this percentage was 8.1.

The figures in Table 31 and Chart 20 relate only to canneries which reported both Mexican and non-Mexican employees. In this table are included data only for 68, or 76.5 per cent, of the 89 canneries from which reports were received, and data are presented in Table 30. These 68 canneries employed altogether 42,340 workers, as of August 11, 1928, of which 2700, or 6.4 per cent, were Mexicans.

It will be noted that the counties of Santa Clara, Alameda, and Sacramento employed 1656, or 61.2 per cent, of the total Mexican cannery workers reported, and that the next highest number of Mexicans were employed in three canneries located in Los Angeles County.

⁴ This date was selected because it was considered a period of maximum employment.

IN BUILDING AND CONSTRUCTION

It is a known fact that many Mexicans are employed as laborers on public works, where the work is performed by contractors or subcontractors, and in the construction of buildings. But, in order to get a more adequate idea of the extent to which Mexicans are so employed, the Fact-Finding Committee sent out 237 questionnaires to leading building and construction firms throughout the state. Complete returns were received from 159 companies, or from 67 per cent of all schedules sent out.

Of these 159 companies, 98, or 61.6 per cent, employed both Mexican and non-Mexican labor. The total number of employees on the pay rolls of these 98 concerns, as of June 15, 1928, or the nearest representative pay-roll period, was 12,983, of whom 3390, or 26.1 per cent, were Mexicans. The total number of workers employed by all reporting companies was 20,650. The ratio which the Mexicans were to this total was 16.4.

Since no accurate data are available as to the total number of persons employed in all building and construction work, it is impossible to estimate the number of Mexicans employed in this industry. However, it is significant that during June, 1928, a month during which there is a great deal of agricultural activity in the state, 16.4 per cent of the employees of the reporting firms were Mexicans. It is not improbable that if data could be secured from all building and construction firms active during the year 1928, the results obtained would substantiate the assumption that about 16 out of every 100 persons employed in the construction of highways, dams, roads, bridges, buildings, and in street paving are Mexicans.

Companies operating in the southern part of the state declared Mexicans to be very desirable workers because of climatic conditions. They are reported to be less perturbed by the heat of the sun when entirely exposed to it while at work. It appears to be the consensus of opinion that many Mexicans make good pick and shovel laborers and that they are wanted at these occupations because they can be depended upon to remain at them as long as they are wanted.

Italians, Portuguese, Slavs, other foreigners, and Americans were reported working in the same occupations and at the same rates of wages where the same work was performed. But the preponderant majority of the reporting building and construction firms said that when Mexicans are employed as laborers they usually predominate in that occupation.

ON RAILROADS

The Fact-Finding Committee received reports from 18 interstate, municipal, and interurban railroad companies relative to their employment of Mexican labor. Fourteen of these companies reported 10,858 Mexican workers employed as of May, 1928, in the State of California. Six of the larger railroads employed 10,706, or 99 per cent, of the 10,858 Mexicans on the pay rolls of all reporting companies.

Railroads employ Mexicans primarily as section hands and "extra gang" laborers. The Mexicans are secured for the railroads by companies which furnish commissary and other supplies to the laborers employed by the railroads. These commissary companies recruit the Mexicans either directly or through private employment agencies.

The extent to which railroads use Mexican labor is shown by the testimony of E. E. McInnis, general solicitor of the Santa Fe Railroad, given to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization of the House of Representatives at its hearings on the question of restricting Mexican immigration. Mr. McInnis testified, in part, as follows:

Figures furnished by six railroads situated wholly in the west or operating transcontinental lines to the Pacific coast, having in the aggregate 43,546 miles of main track, with great additional mileage of switches, sidings and other tracks, all of which must be maintained for the public service, disclose that from 67 to 68 per cent of their section crews and 90 per cent of their extra gangs are Mexicans. These men do work which absolutely must be done if the railroads of the west and southwest are to continue to function.

The section gangs do the work of constantly keeping in order the tracks and roadbeds. Each crew is definitely assigned to a particular short portion of the track—a particular section—when they are constantly at work in maintenance from day to day. Much of the territory traversed by these and the other lines of the west and southwest is arid, a substantial portion of it is actual desert, and a great deal of it is sparsely settled. The section laborers must live there, for their work is local. Only the Mexican can or will live in many of these districts, and, as the obvious result, if the Mexicans are dispensed with there are no other laborers to take their place.

The work of the extra gangs is not confined to any particular locality. They do the work of improvement and major repair when and where necessity requires it to be done. They live in railroad cars which form a part of work trains, and their place of abode is where these cars are placed. They are to be found where there is steel to be laid, or where a washed-out embankment is to be replaced, or where the track is to be strengthened, or where the grades are being reduced. White men do not seek such employment under any condition; they will not submit to the living conditions which are a necessary incident of the work, and they will not subject themselves to the climatic conditions which those who do this necessary work must meet.

Moreover, the employment offered in this work is not by any means constant, and this is particularly true in the case of extra-gang work. In 1926 the number of men engaged at work in the section gangs of the six roads in question varied from a normal of 31,560 to a peak of 39,905, a variance of 26.4 per cent over normal, while those in the extra gangs varied from a normal of 13,104 to a peak of 22,923, a variance of 75 per cent over normal.

These things—the severity of the climate, the unavoidable hardships incident to living conditions, the nature of the work to be done, and the uncertainty of permanent employment—conspire to make this sort of work unattractive to white men, and the railroads must look to the Mexicans.⁵

According to the same witness, the six railroads situated wholly in the west, namely, the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, the Colorado and Southern, the Denver and Rio Grande Western, the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific, and the Western Pacific, employed during the calendar year 1926 from 33,035 to 47,740 Mexican laborers, as shown in the following tabulation:⁶

	Normal			Peak
	Mexican	Total	Percent- age Mexican	Mexican	Total	Percent- age Mexican
Section laborers.....	21,250	31,560	67	27,135	39,905	68
Extra gang laborers.....	11,785	13,104	90	20,605	22,923	90
Total.....	33,035	44,664	74	47,740	62,828	76

The data secured from reports of railroad companies regarding their Mexican employees in California, referred to above, are not complete enough to establish the exact number of Mexicans employed in this state, but probably about 50 per cent of the 47,740 Mexicans on the pay rolls of the six railroads are employed in California.

DESIRABILITY OF MEXICAN LABOR

The reasons offered for employing Mexican labor in building and construction and on railroads were already referred to in preceding sections. Typical and illustrative comments of employers in manufacturing establishments and in canneries regarding the advantages and disadvantages of employing Mexicans are next presented.

Of the 312 firms which employed Mexican and non-Mexican labor, 216 commented upon their relative desirability. One hundred and nineteen firms said in effect that the Mexicans were satisfactory laborers and are fitted for the work at which they are employed. The following are a few typical comments made by representatives of these firms signing the questionnaires:

All Mexicans kept steady are good workers.

Desirable and efficient in our estimation as relating to our type of work.

We have found Mexican labor entirely satisfactory.

We find that they are as efficient as any other nationality in the capacities in which they are employed.

Mexican labor satisfactory when placed in occupations fitted for. They apparently fit well on jobs not requiring any great degree of mentality, and they do not object to dirt.

In certain parts of our plant, particularly the dirtier jobs, Mexicans are the only kind of labor that we have found in the west that will stay with us. For this kind of work we find them very efficient. We pay Mexicans exactly the scale as other nationalities, if they are doing the same work; and it has been our experience that, treated in this manner, they make very loyal and efficient employees. At first we only used them in the common labor manual jobs, but the more intelligent are gradually working up into the better-paid positions with the company. We have a few Mexicans who earn over $150 per month. This, of course, due to overtime work. The majority who have been here six months or longer are earning over $125 per month.

Thirty firms reported Mexican labor to be on the whole unsatisfactory, but said that they could find good labor by proper selecting. One of these firms, employing 18 Mexicans out of a total of 153 employees, describes the Mexicans as "Not very good—we had to pick over groups to obtain desirable employees." Another firm in this category comments: "If carefully selected and properly supervised, they are desirable and efficient." This firm employs 316 Mexicans out of a total of 448 employees. Still another firm said: "Good with us, as we employ only capable class." "We retain in our employ only those who are clean, willing and reliable," is the comment of still another firm.

Forty-two companies reported Mexicans to be less desirable than non-Mexican labor, but they employed them nevertheless, apparently for the reasons indicated below:

In general laundry work they are more reliable, but not as efficient. We seldom hire them in important positions, such as distributing or heads of departments.

Quality of work is excellent, but in the main they are lazy and slow.

We have found they are lazy as a rule, but are all right with a good foreman.

As an average not as desirable because their production is lower per dollar of wages paid.

A very small percentage are efficient and industrious.

Another group of 15 manufacturing establishments reported that Mexicans are not very good workers, but were the only ones available. "We are unable to secure any other class of labor to do our work efficiently," is the comment of one of these firms, engaged in the manufacture of steel castings and forgings and employing 20 Mexicans out of a total of 68 employees. The Mexicans are employed by this firm as grinders and foundry helpers at 50 cents per hour. Another firm producing wooden boxes reports that Mexican helpers are the only ones obtainable. This company had 119 employees, of whom 45 were Mexicans, at daily wage rates from $2.50 to $4. A company manufacturing magnesite employed 25 Mexicans and 23 workers of other nationalities. Said the mine superintendent of this company: "We do not consider Mexican labor as efficient as non-Mexican, but are unable to secure non-Mexican miners in this district." This company pays its workers from $3.50 to $3.75 per day.

Another company manufacturing paints, varnishes, and lead products reports that Mexicans are on the average not as efficient as workers of other nationalities, but that at times Mexican labor is the only kind of labor available. A glass manufacturing concern which employed over 100 Mexicans said: "Mexican labor is not as reliable as white labor, but they will work in the heat where it is hard to keep other labor." The same claim is made by a cement factory. The chief clerk of this company asserts: "This class of labor is not good, but most of the time can get nothing else." A sugar refining factory states: "Without Mexican labor the sugar beet industry would be demoralized."

A millwork and box shoo factory, paying from 35 to 40 cents per hour, claims that Mexican workers would not be used "if Americans would work, but for some reason an American will not work steady in that line."

Nine firms employing only 107 Mexicans declared that workers of that nationality were not desirable. A garment factory employing 20 Mexicans out of 96 employees writes: "In most cases they are unreliable; always late and absent for the least cause—that is why many factories refuse to hire Mexicans." A lumber factory in this group reports: "Only a few hired and find them shiftless." A company manufacturing barrels, kegs, kits and pails, employing only 8 Mexicans and 55 other employees, says: "On the whole the Mexican labor is very unsatisfactory and not very efficient."

So much for opinions as to good and bad qualities of Mexican labor in industrial establishments other than canneries. During the survey of the canning industry an attempt was made to get opinions of superintendents and foremen of canneries as to the relative desirability of Mexican workers. Sixty-eight expressions of opinions were secured from as many superintendents or foremen of canneries. Nineteen of these, all of whom employed Mexicans, considered them desirable workers; while 48 superintendents and foremen said that the Mexicans were not desirable workers in canneries. Of these 48, 39 employed and 9 did not employ Mexicans at the time of the investigation.

The opinions expressed are very contradictory. Typical examples of these opinions are cited below:

Mexicans Are Desirable

Not quarrelsome or "agitating." Slow to learn, but more dependable. Mexican women work harder than Americans because more necessitous. Their work is also cleaner.

They are slow to learn, but become efficient and thorough.

Mexicans Are Not Desirable

Lazy, ignorant, not dependable—not wanted.

If the Mexicans realize you are dependent upon them, they nearly strike for more money, and when you need them the worst, they are not on the job.

Mexicans Are Desirable

Mexican women are good workers. Better in some ways than white women. They follow instructions better, because they are more afraid of being "fired."

Those who have been employed here have been good workers—quiet. They are steady workers, the records showing that they have remained the entire season.

Mexican women are desirable and more efficient than white women. They are accustomed to working in fruit, and most of them have always wandered from place to place working in dry yards and canneries. They are not desired in the packing department. White women are apt to look neater and to be better dressed, giving the packing department a better appearance.

At beginning of season, preference in employment was given to white women. Some of them were so slow and otherwise unsatisfactory that they were let off and replaced by Mexican women who were superior workers. Mexican women are clean and neat workers. However, manager never desired to employ them as packers. Plant wishes to have record of having white women do final handling of fruit.

Mexicans Are Not Desirable

I have no use for them; they don't get what you want them to do.

Willing workers, but lacking in capacity.

As a rule not efficient; therefore not desirable. There are, of course, exceptions.

Slow, undependable, independent "floaters." As soon as they have a few dollars they quit. Too many Mexicans or too many of any foreign nationality cause trouble with other employees. When one leaves, they often all go.

Not as efficient as general cannery labor. Harder to teach.

Not desirable because they will not work more than a week. There are a few exceptions to this statement.

The preceding comments and opinions relative to the desirability and efficiency of Mexican labor are perhaps of small consequence in determining the causes responsible for the employment of Mexican workers in various manufacturing industries.

If they prove anything it is that Mexicans, like others, may be good and bad workers, may and may not be fit for certain occupations. Some of them are steady and reliable; others are floaters and undependable.

The penetration of Mexicans into California industries was probably begun, as indicated by a number of establishments, during the World War when there was a shortage of other labor. The Mexican immigrants in California are now a substantial factor in the labor supply of the state. As the newest immigrant group in California, the Mexicans have gained a strong position in California industries, undoubtedly supplanting other immigrant races and native Americans.

There is every reason to believe that the numbers of Mexicans in California industries will increase with the increased supply of Mexican labor made possible by the present federal immigration laws.

SUMMARY

We may summarize the statistical information presented in this chapter as follows:

1. Out of every hundred wage earners in California manufacturing establishments, about eleven are Mexicans (Table 24).

2. In factories where Mexican and non-Mexican workers are employed, the former constituted 17 per cent of the total employees (Table 25).

3. In a number of industries, the percentages which the Mexican workers were of the total workers ranged from 2.4 to 66.3 (Table 26).

4. Mexican workers are employed in largest numbers in industrial establishments having 200 or more employees on their pay rolls. Substantial proportions of Mexicans are also employed in establishments having less than 75 employees on their pay rolls (Table 27).

5. More than one-half of all Mexicans employed in industries are in plants located in Los Angeles County, and only one-tenth are employed in plants located in San Francisco County (Table 29).

6. There are probably in the neighborhood of 28,000 Mexicans employed in California manufacturing industries.

7. In fruit and vegetable canneries, a seasonal industry, the total number of Mexican workers found was 2700, or 5.4 per cent, of the 50,404 employees in this industry at the time of the enumeration. In Los Angeles County, this proportion is 23.5; in San Bernardino County, 16.3; and in Sacramento County, 10.2. Of the 2700 Mexican cannery workers, 985, or 36.5 per cent, were males; and 1715, or 63.5 per cent, were females (Table 30).

8. Judging by the returns from 159 building and construction companies, which employed 20,650 workers as of June 15, 1928, 16.4 per cent of the employees in all classes of construction are Mexicans. The building and construction firms which reported both Mexican and non-Mexican employees had 12,983 employees of all nationalities, of whom 3390, or 26.1 per cent were Mexicans.

9. Six large interstate and interurban railroads had 10,706 Mexican laborers on their pay rolls in May, 1928; but the number of Mexican laborers employed by railroads in California is undoubtedly much in excess of this number.

10. Mexican immigrants have gained a strong foothold in California industries, undoubtedly supplanting other immigrant races and native Americans.

CHAPTER V

OCCUPATIONS AND WAGE RATES

IN MANUFACTURING ESTABLISHMENTS

In the preceding chapter were presented statistics relating to the numbers and proportions of Mexicans in nonagricultural occupations. In this chapter data are presented showing the occupations of Mexican workers and wage rates paid them.

The statistics regarding occupations and wage rates are secured from the questionnaires referred to in the preceding chapter and from special monthly reports of private employment agencies furnishing Mexican labor.

All but two of the 312 industrial establishments which employed Mexicans reported that Mexicans and non-Mexicans were employed in the same occupations, and only eight of these establishments reported lower wage rates for Mexicans employed in the same occupations with other persons of other nationalities. The questionnaires did not ask employers to specify the number of Mexicans employed in each occupation. Instead, they were asked to enumerate the occupations at which the Mexicans were employed and to show the lowest and highest rates paid in each occupation.

These data are included in Tables 32 and 33. The exact occupational designations and the lowest and highest hourly or daily wage rates reported are listed in Table 33. In scrutinizing these figures, it is to be borne in mind that the lowest and highest wage rates for any occupation shown were not necessarily paid by the same employer and that although the occupational designations are the same in several industries, the actual work performed under these designations might be different. For instance, the daily rates for helpers reported in the stone, clay, and glass products industries are from $3.50 to $4.25; in the metals, machinery and conveyances industries, the daily rates for helpers reported are from $4 to $4.50. But the helpers in these groups of industries are performing dissimilar work. Furthermore, while in each group of industries laborers are listed separately as a distinct occupation, some of the other occupations listed under the same groups of industries might have been properly designated as laborers. Thus, in the stone, clay, and glass industries, section hands, yardmen, sorters, and others, though listed as distinct occupations, might have been all classified as laborers. And in all probability, some of the reporting firms in this group of industries actually reported such occupations as laborers.

Since, as already stated, the number of Mexican workers receiving specified wage rates is not available, it is impossible to present data on average wage rates in the different occupations at which they are employed.¹ Table 32, and Charts 21, 22, and 23, however, show how many times various wage rates were reported by industrial establishments which employed Mexicans. Thus, there were reported 255 hourly wage rates, 250 daily wage rates, and 136 weekly wage rates.² Of the 255 hourly wage rates shown 111, or 43.6 per cent, were less than 50 cents; 62, or 24.3 per cent, were from 50 to 55 cents;³ and 82, or 32.1 per cent, were 55 or more cents per hour.

Of the 250 daily wage rates quoted by employers, 82, or 32.8 per cent, were $4 to $4.50; 34, or 13.6 per cent, were from $4.50 to $5; 30, or 12 per cent, were $5 to $5.50; 149, or 59.6 per cent, were under $4.50; and 101, or 40.4 per cent were $4.50 or over.

Of the 136 weekly wage rates quoted, 21, or 15 per cent, paid $16 to $18; 19, or 14 per cent, paid from $18 to $20; and 19, or 14 per cent, paid from $24 to $26; 17, or 12.5 per cent, paid from $30 to $32; 67, or 49.3 per cent, paid under $24; 99, or 72.8 per cent, paid under $30; and 37, or 27.2 per cent, paid $30 or more per week.

It should be remembered that these hourly, daily, and weekly wage rates quoted relate to the 12,113 Mexicans employed in the 312 manufacturing establishments referred to in Table 24 of the preceding chapter.

The data included in Table 33 are indicative of the kind of work performed by Mexicans and of the wage rates paid them in various industries.

The detailed data in this table relating to hourly and daily wage rates are briefly summarized by groups of industries in the following tabulations:

IN FRUIT AND VEGETABLE CANNERIES

As already pointed out in the preceding chapter, Mexican women are employed in canneries mostly in cutting departments; occasionally in canning departments; but they are rarely employed as packers. Mexican male workers are employed in various manual jobs, such as trucking, loading and unloading.

Minimum wage rates paid in fruit and vegetable canneries to women and minors are regulated by the Division of Industrial Welfare of the Department of Industrial Relations; and there is, of course, no distinction made between women and minors of different nationalities. No attempt was made by the Fact-Finding Committee to ascertain the earnings of Mexicans in canneries.

IN BUILDING AND CONSTRUCTION

Practically all building and construction firms, referred to in the preceding chapter, reported that Mexicans were employed chiefly as common laborers, at pick and shovel work, or at trench digging and cesspool work. Several companies indicated that they employed Mexicans as teamsters and graders. Mexicans are also selected for cement and concrete work at which occupation they are considered well adapted.

The hourly wage rates paid Mexican laborers in building and construction vary from forty to fifty cents, but the prevailing hourly rate is fifty cents. The daily wage rates vary from $3.50 to $5, but the rate most commonly paid is $4.

The hourly wage rates for teamsters and muckers is fifty cents, while the reported daily wage rates for these occupations of Mexicans vary from $3.75 to $5.50 per day; the rate most frequently paid is $4.

Mexican cement finishers are reported as receiving from $1 per hour to $11 per day, but $8 for an eight hour day appears to be the prevailing rate.

Hourly rates for concrete laborers are from 50 to 62½ cents; daily rates from $4 to $6.95.

The hourly wage rates quoted for asphalt packers were 50 or 62½ cents per hour. Daily wage rates for these occupations of Mexicans were reported from $6 to $7.50.

These hourly and daily wage rates were paid by the building and construction firms referred to in the chapter on Mexicans in non-agricultural occupations, which reported Mexican laborers on their pay rolls. The wage rates paid to building laborers hired through employment agencies is shown in a subsequent section of this chapter.

ON RAILROADS

While most Mexicans employed by railroads are "section hands" or "extra gang" laborers, Mexicans are also employed by the carriers as laborers in mechanical and motive power departments, and in other capacities.

Several railroads reported the employment of Mexicans as machinists and electricians at 76 cents per hour, boilermakers at 71 cents, car repairers at 64 cents, boilermakers' helpers at 56 cents, and boiler-washers at 60 cents.

The hourly wage rates paid track laborers vary between 33¼ cents and 38 cents. One railroad pays track laborers from 33¼ to 37 cents per hour; another, from $2.96 to $3.04 per day, or from 37 to 38 cents per hour. An interurban railroad company reports the hourly wage rate for Mexican track laborers to be from 30 to 32½ cents. Another interurban railroad pays track laborers $2.43 per day; still another such railroad pays track laborers 45 cents per hour.

Section and extra gang laborers are usually housed in box cars or in houses and shacks furnished by railroads rent free. Although, as we have just seen, the rates of pay vary with different companies, the average hourly wage paid is 38 cents, and the average daily rate is $3.06. This is shown by the following tabulation taken from records of private employment agencies which furnished 5682 railroad laborers during 1928.

*In addition to these 5665 Mexican workers, seventeen more Mexicans were furnished to railroads by the same agencies on a contract basis.

WAGE RATES IN VARIOUS OCCUPATIONS

The Fact-Finding Committee secured reports from 23 private employment agencies regarding the numbers of Mexicans which they sent out to work during the calendar year 1928 and the wage rates paid in the various occupations.

These data were furnished by 9 agencies in Los Angeles, 11 in Sacramento, and 3 in Stockton. With but a few minor exceptions, these include all private employment agencies which handle Mexican labor.

Information was secured for 14,343 Mexicans sent to work in various occupations, as follows:

Occupations	Number of Mexicans sent to work	Per cent of total
Total.....	14,343	100.0
Railroad laborers.....	5,682	39.6
Laborers (not elsewhere specified).....	3,821	26.6
Agricultural laborers.....	3,491	24.4
Building and construction laborers.....	721	5.0
Hotel and restaurant.....	410	2.9
Industries.....	134	.9
Homes and apartments.....	75	.5
Mercantile establishments.....	9	.1

The exact occupational designations at which these Mexicans were sent out to work are shown in subsequent tables. The preceding tabulation shows that two-fifths of the labor handled by private employment agencies is railroad labor, recruited by the agencies for the commissary companies which supply Mexican labor to railroads and to which reference was already made in the preceding chapter. The remaining three-fifths, as will be seen, are also either unskilled or semi-skilled workers.

AVERAGE WAGE RATES

The average hourly, daily, weekly, and monthly wage rates, with and without board, of the 14,343 Mexicans to whom the private employment agencies sold jobs are shown in the following tabulations:

	Average	Number of Mexicans receiving
Wage rates without board:
Hourly -----	$0.43	3,310
Daily -----	3.51	2,937
Weekly -----	16.60	41
Monthly -----	67.86	7
Pieceworkers -----	----	1,546
Wage rates with board:
Hourly -----	$0.38	5
Daily -----	2.61	341
Weekly -----	14.99	301
Monthly -----	47.75	137
Pieceworkers -----	----	32
Track laborers:
Hourly -----	$0.38	4,313
Daily -----	3.06	1,348
Contracts -----	----	17
Total -----		14,343

It will be noted in the above tabulation that the average hourly wage rate, without board, is 43 cents; with board, 38 cents, a difference of 5 cents. The average daily wage rate, without board, is $3.51; with board, $2.61, a difference of 90 cents. The difference between the average weekly wage rates, with and without board, is only $1.61. The explanation for this small difference is that the weekly jobs which offer board are largely hotel and restaurant jobs, and are quite different from the jobs which do not include board.

WAGE RATES WITHOUT BOARD

Table 34 and Charts 24 and 25 show the hourly and daily wage rates, without board, of 6243 Mexicans to whom private employment agencies furnished jobs.

It will be observed that of the 3306 Mexicans who filled jobs at hourly wage rates, 2769, or 83.8 per cent, received wage rates from 40 to 45 cents and 98.4 per cent of these Mexicans received less than 45 cents per hour.

Of the 2937 Mexicans who were sent to work at daily wage rates, 1110, or 37.8 per cent, received from $3 to $3.50; whereas, 1567, or 53.4 per cent, received from $3.50 to $4. Of the 2937 sent to work at daily wage rates, 2859, or 97.3 per cent, received less than $4 per day.

WAGE RATES WITH BOARD

In Table 35, next presented, are shown the daily, weekly, and monthly wage rates, with board, of 787 Mexican laborers to whom the private employment agencies furnished jobs.

A perusal of this table shows that of the 349 Mexicans who were sent to work at daily wage rates, 223, or 63.9 per cent, received from $2 to $2.50 per day; 51, or 14.6 per cent, received from $2.50 to $3 per day; and 60, or 17.2 per cent, received from $3.50 to $4 per day.

Of the 301 Mexicans who were sent to work at weekly rates of wages, with board, 74, or 24.6 per cent, received from $12 to $14; and 189, or 62.8 per cent, received from $16 to $18.

The same private employment agencies furnished 137 jobs to as many Mexicans at monthly wage rates, with board. Of this total 49, or 35.8 per cent, received under $40, and 38, or 27.8 per cent, received from $60 to $70.

In addition to the 787 Mexican laborers, whose wage rates are shown in Table 35, five other Mexicans were sent to work at hourly wage rates, with board. These Mexicans were paid from 30 to 40 cents per hour.

FREE CAMPING FACILITIES

It should be borne in mind that in agricultural occupations at which Mexicans are employed, they are usually furnished, free of charge, camping facilities, such as tents, shacks, or houses. This holds true not only in cases where board is furnished, but also in cases where the Mexicans board themselves. Usually, the Mexicans furnished their own bedding, and sometimes their own tents.

The same is true in building and construction, especially in the construction of roads and highways, when such construction is carried on away from centers of population. In such instances Mexicans and others are frequently furnished free camping facilities.

The Division of Housing and Sanitation of the Department of Industrial Relations has supervision over the adequacy of the camping facilities furnished by employers when such camps are for more than five employees.

WAGE RATES BY OCCUPATIONAL GROUPS

The hourly, daily, weekly, and monthly wage rates, with and without board, of 7071 Mexicans to whom the private employment agencies furnished jobs are shown by occupational groups in Tables 36 and 37.

Wage rates, without board, are shown in Table 36. The average hourly wage rate of laborers was 44 cents; their average daily wage rate was $3.80; and their average weekly wage rate was $15.89. For agricultural laborers the average hourly wage was 36 cents; their daily wage rate was $3.04; and their average weekly wage rate was $12. Other average wage rates, without board, shown in Table 36, are: For building and construction laborers the average hourly rate was 46 cents; their average daily wage rate was $3.90; for hotel and restaurant workers the average daily rate was $3, while the average weekly rate was $10; for workers in industries the average daily rate was $3.79, while their average weekly rate was $19.10.

Wage rates, with board, are shown in Table 37. The average daily wage rate for agricultural laborers was $2.62; their average monthly wage rate was $58.66. For building and construction laborers the average daily wage rate was $2.33, and their average monthly wage rate was $50. For hotel and restaurant workers the average weekly wage rate was $15.28, and the average monthly wage rate was $59.74. The average daily wage rate for the Mexicans sent to work in homes and apartments was $1.86; their weekly wage was $10.38, and their average monthly wage rate was $27.79. In many instances these rates undoubtedly also included free rent, although this fact was not reported by the employment agencies.

REPRESENTATIVENESS OF THE WAGE RATES

The foregoing two tables show average wage rates by occupational groups. These statistics were derived from Tables 38 and 39, next exhibited, which show, in detail, the occupations and wage rates paid to 8661 Mexicans, other than railroad laborers, to whom the fourteen private employment agencies, already referred to, furnished jobs during the calendar year 1928.

Altogether, as was shown in a preceding section of this chapter, these private employment agencies furnished jobs to 14,343 Mexicans during 1928. Of this total 5682 were railroad laborers and 8661 were other workers. Tables 34 to 39 relate to the wage rates of the 8661 Mexicans.

It is probable that in general average wage rates based upon reports from private employment agencies may be somewhat lower than the prevailing average wage rates in various occupations. The reason for this is that the wage rates quoted by employment agencies are those at which workers are hired. Many employers raise the wages of their employees at regular intervals until the maximum rates of pay are reached. However, since most of the Mexicans hired through employment agencies are laborers sent to work on seasonal and relatively short time jobs, the average wage rates based upon the records of employment agencies presented in this report may be considered, on the whole, representative and indicative of prevailing wage rates.

OCCUPATIONS OF MEXICAN IMMIGRANTS AND EMIGRANTS

In view of the fact that Mexicans are employed in large numbers in nonagricultural occupations, the questions arise whether the alien immigrant Mexicans are primarily agricultural or nonagricultural workers and whether, in the United States, the Mexicans follow the same occupations which they followed in Mexico.

As regards occupations of immigrants, before and after coming to the United States, it appears to be an established fact that the tendency among them, particularly among those who arrive into the United States as farmers and farm laborers, is to abandon these occupations and to enter into unskilled or semiskilled trades in the United States.⁴

⁴ See "Occupations of Immigrants Before and After Coming to the United States," by Louis Bloch, in the Quarterly Publications of the American Statistical Association, June, 1921, pp. 750-764.

Mr. Harry Jerome, in his book on Migration and Business Cycles, says the following regarding the changing occupations of immigrants:

"In the immigration years 1908 to 1923, 26 per cent of immigrants were classified as 'laborers,' while 70 per cent of emigrants are placed in this class. On the other hand, 25 per cent of immigrants and less than 2 per cent of emigrants are listed as farm laborers; and the skilled who compose 22 per cent of the immigrants were only 12 per cent of the emigrants."⁸

In Table 40, the occupations of immigrant aliens, all nationalities, and of immigrant alien Mexicans are compared with occupations of the emigrant aliens, all nationalities, and of the emigrant alien Mexicans. The data included in this table, taken from the reports of the commissioner general of immigration, are for the six fiscal years ended June 30, 1928.

It will be noticed that whereas 32 per cent of all immigrant aliens admitted are skilled, only 10.4 per cent of the alien immigrant Mexicans are skilled; and while only 23.7 per cent of all immigrant aliens admitted are classified as laborers, 77.5 per cent of the immigrant alien Mexicans are so classified. Again, farmers and farm laborers were 13.9 per cent of the total immigrant aliens admitted, but only 4.7 per cent of Mexicans admitted were in this occupation.

Of all emigrant aliens who departed during the six years, 15.4 per cent were in the skilled occupations and 60.5 per cent were laborers. As regards immigrants, as a whole, therefore, it appears that they abandon the skilled and farming occupations in the United States and become laborers or semiskilled workers.

The situation appears to be different with the Mexican immigrants. Of the departing Mexican immigrant aliens 74.1 per cent were laborers, compared with 77.5 per cent laborers of the incoming Mexicans. The proportion of Mexican emigrant aliens in the skilled occupations is very nearly the same as is this percentage of Mexican immigrant aliens.

Even allowing for probable errors in the reported occupations of immigrants and emigrants, it appears clear from the data in Table 40, that the Mexican immigrants are preponderantly laborers and that they are not primarily agricultural laborers. While other immigrants, who come in as farmers and farm laborers or as skilled workers, become unskilled laborers in the United States, Mexican immigrants, who come in as laborers, remain laborers in the United States.

SUMMARY

The figures presented in this chapter regarding the occupations and average wage rates of Mexicans may be briefly restated as follows:

1. According to the best information available, the following wage rates are paid to Mexicans employed in manufacturing industries (Table 32):

(a) 43.6 per cent receive hourly wage rates less than 50 cents; 24.3 per cent from 50 to 55 cents; and 32.1 per cent 55 or more cents.

(b) 32.8 per cent receive daily wage rates from $4 to $4.50; 13.6 per cent from $4.50 to $5; 12 per cent from $5 to $5.50; 59.6 per cent under $4.50; and 40.4 per cent $4.50 or more.

(c) 15 per cent receive weekly wage rates from $16 to $18; 14 per cent, from $18 to $20; 14 per cent, from $24 to $26; 12.5 per cent, from $30 to $32; 49.3 per cent, under $24; 72.8 per cent, under $30; and 27.2 per cent, $30 or more.

2. Most Mexicans in manufacturing industries work as laborers; but Mexicans are also employed in relatively skilled occupations, such as the following (Table 33):

(a) In the metals, machinery, and conveyances group of industries: Blacksmiths, core makers, foundry machine moulders, machinists, mechanics, pipe makers, and polishers;

(b) In the wood manufactures group of industries: Finishers, machinists, stickermen, and upholsterers;

(c) In the chemical, oils, and paints industries: Joint turners, mechanics, and painters;

(d) In the printing and paper goods group of industries: Bookbinders, and workers in photo and job press departments.

(e) In the foods, beverages, and tobacco group of industries: Bakers, butchers, mechanics, and packers.

3. In fruit and vegetable canneries, Mexican female workers are employed mostly in cutting departments, occasionally in canning departments, but rarely in packing departments.

4. In the building and construction industry, Mexicans are employed chiefly as common laborers, at pick and shovel work and at trench digging and cesspool work; also at grading.

5. Judging by the reports received from representative building and construction firms, hourly wage rates of Mexicans in this industry range from 40 to 50 cents; daily wage rates range from $3.50 to $5; but 50 cents per hour and $4 per day appear to be the prevailing rates of pay for Mexicans in this industry.

6. Mexicans are employed by railroads primarily as "section and extra gang" laborers, whose average hourly wage rate is 38 cents and whose average daily wage rate is $3.06.

7. Fourteen private employment agencies, from which reports were received, sent 14,343 Mexicans to work at various jobs during the calendar year 1928. Of this total, 39.6 per cent were railroad laborers; 24.4 per cent, agricultural laborers; 5.0 per cent, building and construction laborers; 26.6 per cent, other laborers; and 4.4 per cent, workers in industries, in hotels and restaurants, in homes and apartments, and in mercantile establishments.

8. The average wage rates, without board, of Mexicans other than railroad workers, sent to work by employment agencies, are as follows:

(a) Hourly, 43 cents; daily, $3.51; weekly, $16.60; and monthly, $67.86.

9. The average wage rates, with board, of Mexicans other than railroad workers, sent to work by employment agencies, are as follows:

(a) Hourly, 38 cents; daily, $2.61; weekly, $14.99; and monthly, $47.75.

10. In agriculture, in building and construction, and on railroads, camping facilities, free of charge, are often provided in addition to the wages paid.

11. Although the wage rates quoted by employment agencies are those at which men are hired, the average wage rates of Mexicans based upon the records of employment agencies may be considered, on the whole, as representative and indicative of prevailing wage rates.

12. The preponderant majority of Mexican alien immigrants who come into the United States are "laborers," not "farmers and farm laborers." while other immigrant aliens who arrive as farmers and farm laborers and as skilled workers abandon these occupations in the United States to become laborers, or unskilled workers, the Mexicans who enter the United States as laborers, or unskilled workers, remain such in the United States (Table 40).

CHAPTER VI

MEXICAN LABOR UNIONS

That the Mexican immigrants are beginning to orientate themselves in California is evidenced by the fact that they have begun to organize into unions for the purpose of improving living and working conditions in the land of their adoption. The effort to organize the Mexican workers into unions seems to have begun in Los Angeles in November, 1927. On the tenth day of that month, a committee of the Federation of Mexican Societies in Los Angeles met and adopted a resolution calling upon the mutual and benefit societies affiliated with the Federation to lend their moral and financial support to the cause of organizing trade unions of Mexican workers.

This resolution recited the "deplorable condition of abandonment and isolation" in which the Mexicans lived in the United States, "deprived of food, cooperation and mutual help." The resolution stated, "that the present conditions of the Mexican worker compel him to work on a minimum salary basis to his own detriment and the harmful effect to the workingmen of this region and those of American nationality who naturally feel that the competition is detrimental," and called attention to the fact that much discussion had taken place at the convention of the American Federation of Labor held in Los Angeles in 1927, regarding the harmful effects of Mexican competition with American workers.¹

THE CONFEDERATION OF MEXICAN LABOR UNIONS

Soon after this resolution was sent out to the Federated Mexican Societies local unions were organized in Los Angeles and in other places in southern California, which formed the Confederation of Mexican Labor Unions (Confederacion de Uniones Obreras Mexicanas). On March 23, 1928, the Committee on Laws of the Confederation formulated a constitution, later adopted by the Confederation Convention, modeled after the Regional Confederation of Labor in Mexico (the CROM). The following are some of the points which appear in the Declaration of Principles embodied in the constitution:

1. That the exploited class, the greater part of which is made up of manual labor, is right in establishing a class struggle in order to effect an economic and moral betterment of its conditions, and at last its complete freedom from capitalistic tyranny.

2. That in order to be able to oppose the organization, each day more complete and intelligent, of the exploiters, the exploited class must organize as such, the base of its organization being the union of resistance, in accord with the rights which the laws of this country concede to native and foreign workers.

3. That the corporations, possessors of the natural and social wealth, being integral parts of the international association of industry, commerce and banking, the disinherited class must also integrate by means of its federations and confederation into a single union of all the labor of the world.

The constitution also provided for a Central Committee composed of two delegates from each of the federated unions. The Central Committee functions for the Confederation between conventions, and is authorized and instructed by the constitution "to make solidarity agreements with labor organizations, national and foreign, as may be appropriate, but always without weakening in any manner the autonomy of this organization and the nationality of its components."

Article 18 of the constitution also provides that "the Central Committee is charged with the duty of taking the necessary action with the Mexican government duly to regulate Mexican immigration to this country and repatriation."²

This requirement, incorporated in the constitution, that the Central Committee seek to regulate further Mexican immigration into the United States was explained by officials of Mexican unions to an investigator for the Fact-Finding Committee to mean that the Mexican laborers already in the United States feel the competition of the newly arriving Mexican immigrants. It is therefore one of the important aims of the Confederation to seek to restrict further Mexican immigration into the United States and to try to repatriate as many Mexican laborers as wish to return to their native land. It is one of the purposes of the Confederation to prevail upon the Mexican government to offer colonization opportunities to those Mexicans who find it difficult to make a living in California because of lack of employment.

THE MANIFESTO

On January 9, 1928, the Central Committee of the Confederation of Mexican Labor Unions issued a Manifesto setting forth principles of the Confederation and inviting all Mexican societies and unorganized Mexican laborers to attend the first convention of the Confederation. Since this manifesto describes the philosophy, aspirations, and purposes of the Mexican labor movement in California an exact copy of it, published in English by the Central Committee, is reproduced below:

MANIFESTO

From the active Group of the Federation of Mexican Laborer's Union in the United States

Fellow Countrymen:

In view of the difficult situation which confronts approximately a million Mexican laborers residing in the United States, the active group which directs the work of the Federation of Mexican Laborer's Unions which have just been founded in the city of Los Angeles, has decided to publish this Manifest in order to make known its fundamental principles and the point of view it has taken toward a successful accomplishment of the work it has initiated.

It is undisputable that the numerous Mexican Colonies in the United States are composed almost in their whole of working men, proletarians that so far have lived in the utmost disorganization, helpless and ignorant of the world wide Social movement, which works entirely within the law for their improvement.

Social unity is indispensable for the prosperity of the laboring classes, promoting their defense, stimulating remunerative salaries and the constant betterment of the proletarian.

This added to the conditions which prevail among Mexican labor that has come into the United States to lend its work and effort, along with the fact that he is a foreigner, which deprives him of the full protection that is given to the natives and in the present circumstances is compelled to work at a minimum wage which is not only harmful to himself, but also to the organized American workman.

All this at the present makes necessary an organization capable of uniting as a whole the Mexican laboring classes in the United States. On the other hand it must be understood that this movement aim is not to agitate, nor to spread or instigate disolvent ideas. All that is desired is to equalize Mexican labor to American labor and to obtain for them what the Law justly allows them.

The active group recognizes that the laboring Mexican has not come to this country to legislate, and considers absurd propagation of disolvent doctrines which only lead to the ruin of the worker, mucha more sin he is a foreigner.

For the carrying out of these ideas and to form a general plan of activities, a convention will be held in the city of Los Angeles to which all the Mexican Societies established in the United States no matter what their principles and also the unorganized labor are invited to attend, that they may join this movement for their own welfare conscious that the effort that they put on this work shall transform the present concept of the Mexican laborer in the United States.

And so that it will not be supposed that the movement in question is harmful, the Active Group makes known its fundamental principles.

PRINCIPLES THAT THE FEDERATION OF MEXICAN LABORERS WILL UPHOLD

1. To organize all Mexican worker in the U. S. in Unions according to Sindical principles.

2. To establish a solid pact with the American and the Mexican working men that any difficulty in the future may be solved mutually.

3. To establish likewise solid relations with the organized Labor of Mexico (Confederacion Regional Obrera Mexicana) and to try to stop the immigration of unorganized Labor into the U. S. which is harmful to the working men of both Countries.

4. To do away with the exploitation of which Mexican victims in the so called employment Agencies, and to get the unions to constitute their own employment department in which stpply and demand can be carried on with out a fee so that the workingman's economical interests may not suffer.

5. To constitute prevision offices with the exclusive object of illustrating to Mexican laborers who for the first time come to the U. S. as well as to those who already reside here, all that is referent to working systems, job revenues, contract, forms, interpretations' translations from inglish to spanish or vice-versa working man's insurance indemnizations etc. etc.

6. To keep Mexican laborers from being exploited in the so called commissary stores that still exist in some regions of the U. S., by substituting in their place cooperative stores in which the working man can get all his needs at just prices.

7. To study and resolve in accord with the Mexican government the best systems of repatriation so that those wishing to go back will form agricultural cooperative and receive the best guarantees.

8. Negotiate with the Mexican Govern so that the inmigration of Mexican Labor into the U. S. may be regulated.

Besides the effort for the realization of these principles, the Federation Mexican Labor Unions will do all within its power toward the improvement and good reputation of the Mexican colonies in the U. S., having as a point of view the following principles.

1. Animate by all possible way the conservation of our racial and patriotic principles.

2. To promote a strong cultural campagn giving preference to the education of our children, for which we shall build schools and libraries as is possible.

3. To raise a beneficence fund towards helping our indigent countrymen and to build up or help other Mexican Societies for the establishment of exclusive Mexican hospitals, orphan asylums, alm houses, etc.

4. Constitute Committees of defence which will have competent lawyers, paid by the Mexican colonies themselves so that these with the help of the consulate can effectively defend Mexican who are put in jail, in many cases by mere ignorance of the law.

After having made known these principles the active group invites all Mexican workmen in the U. S. to form labor unions that they may lend their contingent to this great undertaking adhesions received in the office of the Federation.

Another manifesto, which is in all respects similar to the one just quoted, but worded a little differently, was issued by the General Committee of the Confederation in March, 1929. This manifesto advised that: "In order to make known the work developed in the first year of the life of the Confederation of Mexican Labor Unions, there will soon be held in the city of Los Angeles the second convention in which will be made known all the work carried on for the benefit of Mexican labor in the United States, to which it formally invites all the Mexican societies established in the United States, whatever may be their principles and also to all the Mexican workers even though not organized in any way, so that they may join in this just struggle for their own interests, knowing that the force which they put in the work will transform the present conception which is held of the Mexican worker in the United States."

The principles of this manifesto also called for the organization of all Mexican workers in the United States against exploitation by employment agencies, and commissary stores. The securing of higher wages for all Mexican laborers, the restricting of further Mexican immigration into the United States, the organizing of schools for Mexican children, and the establishing of defense funds to aid "Mexicans in jails, there in many cases through sheer ignorance of the laws," are among the objectives also included in March, 1929, manifesto.
